MAN HELD BY POLICE IN MURDER MYSTERY, VINDICATED

HAYNES FREED

HUNT SUIT CASE BUYER

Rigid Examination of Haynes and Wingfield Failed to Show Any Connection With Winthrop Crime—Wingfield's Own Account of Third Degree Ordeal.

Put through the third degree by Captain Dugan at Police Headquarters to-day, William A. Haynes of No. 54 Chambers street satisfied the police that he could have been in no way connected with the Winthrop dress suit case mystery. He was ordered released.

Samuel B. Wingfield, optician, of No. 3 Tremont row, who was held as a witness because he said that Haynes had made statements to him about the cutting up of a body, was also freed from custody.

Pawnbrokers Rubin and Berkman, who remember the man who bought the dress suit case in which the torso was found, declared that Haynes in no way resembled the purchaser.

WILLIAM A. HAYNES, AS HE APPEARED WHILE UNDERGOING "THIRD DEGREE."

With this phase of the case eliminated, the police are to-day bending their efforts to uncover further evidence. On the finding of the man who bought the suit case from Berkman they base their hopes of success in the solution of the mystery.

WITH RENEWED ENERGY.

Search for the head and the other missing parts of the body has been started with renewed energy. It is now considered time for the parts to rise to the surface.

Chief McNeill of Winthrop police has asked sailing men and fishermen who are about the harbor to keep close watch for any object seen floating in the water.

If the head can be found there will, even at this late date, be something tangible that will help in the identification of the victim.

There is strong belief in the minds of the police that the missing parts have not been burned, but will be found somewhere about the harbor. They believe that another dress suit case may be found containing the rest of the body.

While there was no hope in their minds that the detention of Haynes would in any way help solve the mystery, they did not release him until they were perfectly satisfied of his innocence of any knowledge of the case.

For this reason both Haynes and Wingfield were compelled to pass through three hours of sharp questioning.

Joseph Berkman, the Pleasant street pawnbroker who sold the dress suit case in which the torso was found, was called to headquarters to look at Haynes. He was with him nearly half an hour.

"That is not the man," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter when he came from the office.

PAWNBROKER SAYS "NO."

"I looked Haynes over very carefully. It needed but a glance to tell me that he was not the man, but I wanted to be very sure. I talked with him and I was satisfied that he could not be the one to whom I sold the case.

"That man was altogether different from the fellow they have here. The other man was tall and better dressed. I am perfectly satisfied that I have never seen this fellow in my store."

Haynes and Wingfield were taken from Joy street a few minutes before 3 o'clock and hurried to Pemberton square. Captain Dugan was waiting for them when they arrived.

"I am going to examine both these fellows thoroughly," said the criminal investigator before the session in his office. "They will both have to tell their stories to me in full. No stone will be left unturned to find out what is right."

Both men faced the crowd somewhat anxiously and appeared to be glad when they were led within the doors of Captain Dugan's private office. Wingfield was soon after asked to step into one of the other offices.

QUESTIONED VERY CLOSELY.

Alone with Haynes, the police official asked in detail about his movements of

Young Surgeon and Nurse in the Suit Case Mystery

An eminent medical man, who has closely studied the suit case mystery, and who has an intimate knowledge of the details of the autopsy upon the torso of the young woman victim, points out some interesting facts in connection with the case. He says:

"The surgeon who did the work on the body of the young woman was not more than thirty-five years of age. He was not an old school doctor. He was a surgeon used to making autopsies, one who had access to some place like the operating room of a hospital.

"He was more likely a graduate of a medical school here than of one in New York or elsewhere.

"The fact that two or three days elapsed while the woman was in a critical condition indicates that there was a nurse in the case.

"It looks like a private hospital case."

M'NARY HOME, STANDS BY KAISER INTERVIEW

CONGRESSMAN INSISTS THAT THE EMPEROR URGED COMBINE AGAINST JAPAN.

Congressman William S. McNary of the Tenth District arrived home on the White Star liner Canopic to-day, and declares that Emperor William of Germany did make the remarks about the yellow peril repeated by the Massachusetts politician when interviewed in Europe.

Mr. McNary said that the Kaiser told him that as a result of Japan winning the war with Russia all Europe and America must combine against the Japanese and Chinese.

Emperor William denied making the statement, and was so disturbed over the incident that it is believed it will be difficult hereafter for Americans to meet him.

Was Correctly Quoted.

"I was correctly quoted in what I said to the correspondent of an American newspaper," Congressman McNary stated after landing. "If the story published in this country was the same as appeared in London newspapers.

"The Kaiser," said Mr. McNary, "received the delegation of American Congressmen in the Hall of the Flags on the Schloss. He talked with the greatest freedom and frankness. He said nothing whatever to indicate that he wished what he said to be regarded as private or confidential, and there was certainly no reason why he should have given utterance to the views he did unless he particularly desired them to go forth to the public and thought that that occasion was a convenient one for getting his views before the world. Moreover, he talked in English, which he speaks with perfect fluency, and there was no reason why he should be misunderstood.

About That "Yellow Peril."

"And just what did he say about the 'yellow peril'? Did he say, as reported, that it was now to the interest of the United States and Europe to unite for self-protection against Japan?

"That is just what he said, and he elaborated on the subject. He said that it ought now to be apparent to everybody, and this, he said, had been his own position both before and during the war, that with the triumph of Japan that nation would enter upon a period of aggressive competition with Western nations for the markets of the world. Japan, he pointed out, was so near to China that the commercial interests of Japan and China would be practically identical. The United States being between Japan and Europe, would feel the competition of Japan much sooner than Europe, and hence it was clearly, in the Kaiser's view, to the interest of the United States to join with the nations of Europe in a commercial alliance to protect their markets from the competition of Japan and China.

Kaiser Further Talks.

"The Kaiser also spoke of the fact that in fact as the contracts of the German army officers, who had been engaged in instructing the Japanese in military matters, had expired the contracts had not been renewed, the Japanese now getting their military instruction free their own officers. This was taken as additional evidence that henceforth the Japanese proposed to be an independent as possible of Europe. It was the great increase in both military and commercial prestige which would come to Japan as a result of the victory over Russia which the nations of Europe and the United States would have to fear, according to the Kaiser, and he evidently wished to impress this upon us Americans.

"He pointed out that the establishment of the open door in China would be an open door far greater importance for Japan than for the rest of the world."

A delegation of South Boston politicians including members of the Suncoast Club, went down the harbor in a tug boat to welcome Congressman McNary home. There was a band on the tug and it played "Wood Street Rose," "Auld Lang Syne," and "Wearing of the Green," while Mr. and Mrs. McNary stood by the steamship rail and acknowledged the greetings.

CINCINNATI STRANDED AT JAPANESE ISLAND

AMERICAN CRUISER IN DANGEROUS POSITION ON ROCKS NEAR HIME.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

TOKIO, Oct. 2.—The American cruiser Cincinnati is aground on Hime Island, off the Bunge coast.

She was passed there at 1 o'clock today, flying signals for assistance, by the Japanese steamer Tai Wan. The Tai Wan's commander reported the matter at Moji a few hours later. He says that the position of the Cincinnati is perilous.

She appeared to be hard aground and to have been in that position for some time.

Her commanding officers apparently had given up all hope of getting the warship off by her own steam.

The Cincinnati was on her way from Yokohama to Shanghai and must have stranded some time during the night.

Hime is one of the smaller islands of the Goto group and is regarded as a dangerous spot.

Japs May Give Help.

Unless some of the other vessels of the American squadron can be communicated with in time to go to the assistance of the vessel Japanese assistance will be offered. The Tai Wan is a small vessel, and it was impossible for her to succor the stranded ship.

The Cincinnati is one of the largest American warships on the Asiatic station. She was on her way from Yokohama to Shanghai. It is believed she went aground some time during the night.

3,000 Ton Cruiser.

The Cincinnati is a 3,000-ton protected cruiser, 300 feet in length on the water line and forty-two feet of beam. She was built at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and was launched in November, 1892. She was entirely rebuilt in 1902, and is regarded as one of the finest warships of her class in the American Navy. She has had two previous mishaps. In 1894 she struck a submerged rock near Execution Rock lighthouse, and in 1898 ran on a rock off San Diego.

ATTEMPT TO DROWN PALMA FRUSTRATED

PLOTTERS TRIED TO THROW AUTO OF CUBAN PRESIDENT FROM BRIDGE INTO WATER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—An attempt to assassinate President Palma by drowning him has been made, according to a cable dispatch from Havana. Details of the plot come out only Sunday, however, and then by accident.

Inquiries were made why the President was not using his special motor car to travel to and from Havana, as has been his custom, and it was learned that recently wedges had been found driven into a bridge over which he passed, the wedges being so arranged that had his car struck them at anything near its usual speed, it would have been thrown into the water with him. Fortunately, however, the car was running slowly, and passed over the obstructions in safety.

The danger was not recognized until afterward. Since that time President Palma has been driving the seven miles to his home, always accompanied by secret service police.

JAP FIRE LOSS IS $5,000,000

TOKIO, Oct. 2.—Fire in an army store house at Hiroshima destroyed twenty-seven temporary buildings with contents, consisting mostly of provisions and clothing and fodder. The buildings contained enormous amount of goods. The fire is believed to be of incendiary origin. The loss is variously estimated at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

FAMILY AWAY, $1,000 ROBBERY

Thieves looted the home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Stevens, No. 1780 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, while they were at Rochester, Vt., and the robbery was undiscovered until their return.

When Mr. and Mrs. Stevens arrived home they went into the dining room for lunch and found all the silverware on the sideboard had disappeared.

Further search showed that goods valued to the amount of $1,000 had been taken.

SHOTGUN TELLS SUICIDE TALE

NASHUA, N. H., Oct. 2.—The body of Samuel Simpson, fifty-eight, of Hudson, was found near his home to-day with a gunshot wound in the left breast. A double-barrel shotgun was near the body. Medical Examiner Greeley declared death was due to suicide.

BRITISH VETERANS TO MEET TO-NIGHT

There will be a surprise parade Monday evening, October 9, and two weeks later the staff and line officers will meet with the Board of Directors at the Copley Square Hotel.

the last two or three weeks. Haynes told what he had done in that time, where he had been employed and the people he had been with.

After some time Wingfield was called in and Haynes went away. Wingfield went over what he had previously told the police. He stuck to his story.

Then he was confronted with Haynes, and Captain Dugan made the men tell their stories over in the presence of each other.

Katherine Conway, the woman who was present when Wingfield says Haynes made the statements about knowing something of a body that was cut up, was not called to Headquarters. Her story has already been told the police in detail.

Haynes is employed as a checkman at the Ocean Steamship Company's Wharf on Atlantic avenue. His description does not in any way tally with that of the suspect for whom the police of the country are now searching. He has a moustache, is three inches shorter than the man wanted so badly, weighs twenty pounds less and does not correspond to the description of the suspect in many other respects.

Wingfield and Haynes know each other in Richmond, Va., where both formerly made their homes. They have been very chummy, and often drink together. Haynes's condition at the Joy Street Station was such that it was necessary to summon a physician to attend him.

BACK TO SUIT CASE.

The dress suit case remains the only clue in their possession. The authorities cling to the indentification of Pawnbroker Berkman and think it will lead to the finding of the man who committed the crime.

What may be a new clue comes to them through the mysterious disappearance of a young Back Bay woman, the daughter of a very prominent family. Her absence has been kept very secret, and even her nearest relatives having been notified. She has not been gone more than three weeks, and although her family has done all it can to find the young woman, there is not the slightest clue to her whereabouts.

A private detective agency has been employed to find the missing woman. The greatest care is being taken to keep her name from the public. It is said that even the men who are searching for her do not know her name.

The South End suspect has been eliminated from the case. The police have learned from the pawnbroker that the man is not the one they seek. A dozen or more missing women have also been eliminated.

BAFFLED AT EACH TURN.

Chief McNeil of the Winthrop police spent some time yesterday cruising about Winthrop harbor in the hope of finding some clue to the whereabouts of the missing portions of the woman's body, but found nothing that would assist in the solution of the case.

The police confess that they are baffled at every turn the case has taken. They are discouraged with the outlook and despair of ever solving the mystery. It will be by some lucky stroke, they say, if this case will be solved.

Some question still exists as to whether the victim of the mystery was Mrs. Nora Dixon, the Montreal woman, who disappeared with her husband from the home in Brooklyn. A couple with whom they had been spending a few days on their wedding tour. The lack of all marks on the torso makes it very difficult to identify the body, but if it should prove to be that of the young woman, that he and a reporter for a paper were drinking all day Saturday. He says that after Haynes told the story first he was so drunk that he fell over on the floor and did not wake up until 5 o'clock in the morning.

Wingfield came here to police headquarters twice last week and started to tell his story, but he was so drunk that he was told to go home and sober up.

"I do not know on whose initiative this is based," he said, "but Haynes and I are apparently as good friends as ever, for he called out together after they were discharged."

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The present population of Greater New York, according to the census just taken by the Health Department, is 4,342,010.

This is a gain of 904,898 in the last five years. The total gain in the five-year period has been over 38 2-3 per cent.

New York has now become the second city in the world in size and is rapidly overtaking London. In 1901 the official figures indicated a total population of about 6,500,000 in London and its metropolitan suburban zone. There is now a total population of about 5,500,000 in New York and its metropolitan zone, while including the territory within a radius of twenty-five miles of the City Hall in Manhattan. Every part of this area is inhabited by persons who counted on Wednesday in New York or whose occupations are tributary to New York in one way or another.

New York's present wonderful rate of growth will overtake London in five years, and it will be the greatest city the world has ever seen.

President Roosevelt's doctrine of large families has had a stimulating effect on the New York City birth rate. The health department figures show that during the first six months of the present year there were 50,943 births reported, as against 47,584 in the same period in 1904. The increase amounts to 3,359. In the first six months of 1905 there were 29,706 marriages, as against 19,295 in the same period in 1904.

WINGFIELD TELLS STORY IN DETAIL

After being returned from the inquisition room at police headquarters, where he spent two hours going over the things said about the Winthrop dress suit case mystery, which led to the detention of William A. Haynes and himself, Samuel R. Wingfield gave his story of the case to the BOSTON AMERICAN. Here is Wingfield's complete story:

By Samuel R. Wingfield.

Shortly after 8 o'clock this morning I went into Captain Dugan's office. There was a sergeant and several other officers there. Haynes was there and we were cross-questioned before each other. Captain Dugan asked me what was done and said by Haynes and myself a week ago Thursday night.

I told him that Haynes had told me that he had dissected a body and also spoke of buying a dress suit case.

I did not think anything of it, for Haynes frequently gets on this sort of a strain and exaggerates and is regarded as a joke.

Haynes had told me before that he knew something of medicine. To-day he said that all he knew of medicine was the "splel" he had to give in selling a medical book in Massachusetts a month. The next day the body was found.

Then the talk with Haynes came back to me, and besides I remembered that there was a room in the house where Haynes lived which is next to the doctor's office. This room had been occupied by a man and had been set on fire by a man who owned a grudge against her.

"Seemed to Fit Description."

The more I read, the more I thought and Haynes seemed to be to fit the description, in some ways, of the man who bought the case.

Friday night I saw Haynes again. He came up to my office on Tremont Row. We spoke of the mystery of the finding of the body. He was possibly under the impression to know what he was saying, but he said that it was funny, he had to buy that dress suit case himself. Said he needed a dress suit case and intended to buy that on Howard street.

That time I saw him was Saturday night. He came up to my room; I had some liquor and he brought some more. I went down and spent the night with him, at No. 34 Chambers street. I don't know what time we went to bed. When I woke up he was 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

I thought that the matter was something which should be investigated. It kept me irritated that I could not sleep. Yet I was trying all the time to convince myself that it was but a matter of coincidence.

Reporter Called Upon Me.

Anyway, Haynes had always been talking this way. When I saw Haynes on Monday I told Captain Dugan he seemed to be in a natural state of mind. I also told him that when I saw him Tuesday he did not seem to care to discuss the case. Tuesday night I spent the night with Haynes. He came into my office at 11 o'clock and we went down to a place on Pitts street and drank some beer. Then I went home with him.

Wednesday night I saw him again and we spent part of the night with me at my office. A reporter came to me and let me think he was a policeman. After he had talked to him if he had gone away the matter would have been dropped, but he continued to talk about Haynes and got me drunk.

Thursday night I did not see Haynes at all. Friday night I saw him in the restaurant, and we just spoke. Saturday afternoon he left word for me at 3 o'clock that he was sick and asked me to come over and see him, but I couldn't do it, because the reporter was with me. Later in the evening he came to my office. I was pretty full and don't know what time he went away, but they detained him at 1 o'clock Sunday morning.

Took Him Unawares.

I told before him Saturday night what I had said to the other people. It seemed to take him unawares. He couldn't seem to realize that the things he had said to me could have been taken seriously.

They took me at 1 o'clock on Sunday and held me as a witness. After going all over everything with us both for two hours this morning, they let us both go. Captain Dugan told us that he thought there was no foundation in fact for us, to cut out house and know what we are about all the time. If it hadn't been for Haynes and I would never have got into this trouble. Captain Dugan knows what he is talking about.

SAYS DRINK CAUSED ARREST OF HAYNES

Captain Joseph R. Dugan, after the release of Haynes and Wingfield, gave out the following statement:

"As a result of the conference held at the State Street police headquarters, I ordered both discharged. From the stories told there was nothing in the life of Haynes or anything that Wingfield could tell that showed that he ever had any medical knowledge. The only thing that he ever had to do with medicine was last year, when, for a few weeks, he canvassed for a household medical book, but did not have any success with it. Then he went to work for the Ocean Steamship Company.

FAILED TO IDENTIFY.

"Pawnbrokers Rubin and Berkman have looked Haynes over and positively state that he was not the man who bought the suit case in their store. They say that he does not have the slightest resemblance to the man.

"Wingfield told most of the story today, and Haynes told him questions. Haynes says that he has been married twice, his first wife being dead. His first and wife is now in Nova Scotia. He sends her money every week and he showed us letters from her.

"The thing which impressed Wingfield was the fact that there was a doctor who has an office in the same building. There was a fire in the room adjoining his on September 12, and Wingfield, after he read of this mystery, got the impression that this fire was set to cover up the traces of the dismemberment of a body. Wingfield admitted that he was drinking when he told the story. He admits that he and Haynes drank a quart of whiskey on the night when Haynes is said to have told him that he had cut up a body, and that both were very drunk.

LIQUOR STARTED STORY.

"Wingfield admits that he had been trying to get some of the papers to take up his story for three or four days before he found one which would do so. He admits that he was a reporter for a paper here.

MRS. CONWAY SAYS POLICE MADE ERROR

Mrs. Kate Conway, the prepossessing young milliner, who was closeted with Inspector Dugan at Station No. 5 for over two hours on Sunday, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"This whole thing is a horrible mistake, and is due to the foolishness of both Wingfield and Haynes. I think the police are very foolish, and also drove me nearly crazy, for there isn't one single bit of truth in the whole thing, and they ought to know it.

Mrs. Conway's appearance bore out her assertion that she had been "driven nearly crazy," for she was at times almost hysterical and expressed great indignation that she should be brought into the case.

Came from Virginia.

"Those two men came from the same town, Richmond, Va.," said she, "and they were always talking over old times. I used to go down to Mr. Wingfield's office to see him, and Haynes would come in. This whole thing came about through a remark made by Haynes in a boastful way. He's always boasting. He and I were in Wingfield's office on Wednesday or Thursday night and I guess Haynes wanted to borrow a dollar. Anyway, he spoke up and said, 'I've just done a job for the city and I'm going to get $5 for, when I get paid.'

"Of course we asked what kind of a job it was, and he said:

"'Whose body I cut up,' and he replied that it was a body of a man who had been drowned in the bay. He said that the crabs had eaten one side of his face off and that he had been given the job of dissecting the body.

Was on Coroner's Jury.

"Well, I laughed at him and asked him what he knew about dissecting a body or holding an autopsy. He said he'd been on a coroner's jury once and that he had had a lot of experience with dead bodies, and with live ones, too, so that he was able to do a job of that kind. Then he reminded me of what he had said at one time about having been a doctor's assistant and helping at cases of childbirth.

"Haynes didn't say that the body he had cut up was the one which was in the suit case, and he didn't say anything about a suit case until the next night.

"The next night, when Wingfield and myself saw him again, and the subject of the mystery was brought up, he turned Wingfield and said:

"'I nearly bought that suit case they have found, myself, and if I had it would have got me in a lot of trouble.'

"'What do you mean by getting in trouble yourself,' I said. 'You don't know what you're talking about.' And he didn't. He wasn't in any condition to know what he was talking about and any man with the least particle of common sense would not have taken any stock in what he said.

Then Haynes began to brag and said that he knew something about the case that would make a big bluff and I think the police showed very little sense in swallowing it all whole.

Inclined to Boastfulness.

"Why, Haynes told me several months ago that he had acted as a midwife in Richmond, but I didn't swallow it down. I've heard him brag hundreds of times about doing things that I know were impossible for him to do, as he was always under the influence of drink when he was making such boasts. Haynes would brag about how and what he had done, just simply for the love of bragging and impressing people.

"I suppose that Wingfield, knowing that Haynes happened to live in the same house with a physician, got it into his head that Haynes was connected with this case. So far as I am concerned, however, I never had any trouble with Haynes. He never mixed up with or knew anything about this dress suit case affair for which he has been arrested.

"The police questioned me, and I told them all that I knew, just as I am telling you. It is all foolishness, as Haynes knows no more about that affair than I do, and I certainly know nothing about it. It was simply the foolish talk of a man who had been drinking more than was good for him and the rambling of another man who got things twisted.

"When I was ushered into the captain's room at the station house, the air was charged with a solemnity that was taking borne out by the true facts in the case. They asked me all sorts of questions, and as I did not seem to have anything more or less than I had told you, one of the questioners said to me, 'You seem to be bored.' I replied that I was bored as the case was a piece of foolishness and that I could not understand how the police could put any stock of a man who had been drinking as much as Wingfield had.

Plied Him With Drinks.

"I understand that someone—I don't know whether it was the police or not—had him out all day Saturday and were plying him with drinks.

"The only astounding thing that I ever heard Haynes say was that he 'had sent it to the Wingfield.' I was astounded for the fact that about a week ago he sent a letter to his wife, who is in Newport News, Va. From what I gathered from his conversation at different times, he and his wife had had an unpleasantness, but he received the other day a letter from her stating that the quarrel was ended.

"Haynes has been in the habit of imagining all sorts of things, and this matter is simply the result of one of his imaginations. There isn't the least bit of foundation for it. The police were perfectly justified in what they did, as I knew where Mr. Wingfield is. I'd like to see him myself, for I am interested in this notoriety he and his twisted imagination have brought me."

YOUNG SURGEON DID SUIT CASE MURDER

"The surgeon who did the work on the body of the young woman whose torso was found in the suit case at Winthrop was not more than thirty-five years of age. He was not an old school doctor. He was a surgeon used to making autopsies, one who had access to some place like the operating room of a hospital where the peculiar knives used in making autopsies are to be found.

"If looks like a private hospital case. The internal organs were not removed by a surgeon who had the proper knives to do the work. The knife used was a long, keen blade, not broad, but thin, and the cuts were clean, such as a surgeon would make.

Cheapest investment for Rash is Sergent's Drops. No traveler's household should be without it. Look for the cut.

"The man who did the work was a surgeon who had studied medicine in the old school. He was not a young man, but was between thirty-five and forty years of age. He was not a young physician, a graduate of the medical schools of the last ten or fifteen years, as evidenced by the manner in which he removed the internal organs. He was more likely a graduate of a medical school here than of one in New York or elsewhere.

"Here the performing of autopsies on bodies for students is more encouraged. It is more a part of their teaching. For instance, the Medical School at Harvard is dominated by Dr. Councilman, who is a strong apostle of the autopsy, and it is an important part of the training of the Harvard medical student.

"I limit the time within which this man must have finished his studies to ten or at the very most fifteen years, because before ten years ago, abdominal operations were seldom heard of. In fact, I might say that fifteen or twenty years ago they were never attempted. In the largest hospital in Boston it is on record that a new surgeon making charge had to sign an agreement that he would not perform abdominal operations.

Nurse Was Implicated.

"Within the last ten years surgery has made great strides. So the student leaving college ten years ago would not feel any trepidation about making an incision in the abdomen if he thought the exigencies of the case warranted such an operation.

"Now, in the case of this woman the evidence is clear that a vital spot was punctured. In the course of two or three days the doctor in charge knew that some thing was wrong. The patient was in a fever. He realized what had happened. Fearing that blood poisoning was setting in, he decided to go directly to the seat of the trouble. Without hesitation he made an incision in the abdomen to reach it. An old-school physician or surgeon would never have done that.

"Incidentally, it should be noted that the fact that two or three days elapsed while the woman was in this critical condition indicates that there was a nurse in the case. Nobody seems to have thought of a nurse.

Had to See Cause of Failure.

"The partially healed wound in the abdomen showed that it was made not long before death occurred. The operator was unable to remedy his bungling work. The woman died. Then came the question as to how to dispose of the body, but first this curious individual, trained to perform the autopsy, in the habit of performing an autopsy and with every body he could get hold of, cannot resist the desire to see and learn the cause of his failure. He decided upon an autopsy.

"He was now brave in a place or had access to a place where the knives such as he knew he would have to use were kept. Such knives are not kept in the offices of physicians and surgeons. The way in which the work was done indicated that this man had those knives handy. He would be so located if he were in the operating room of a hospital.

Special Knives Used.

"The long, deep incision in front was made with the usual short, wide, heavy knife used for that purpose. But that is not the only thing that indicates the practiced performer of autopsies. This man, with a quick twist of the wrist, severed the heavy bunch of muscles midway and on either side of the vertical opening without cutting the skin on the surface. This is customary in order to facilitate entrance into the body.

SISTER SURPRISED THAT POLICE FAIL TO FIND MRS. SCHAPIRO

When Miss Jennie Nathan, half sister of the still missing Mrs. Rose Schapiro, viewed the torso Saturday at the Harvard Medical School in an endeavor to identify it as her half sister, she stated, but quickly recovered and examined the gruesome sight in detail.

Finally the young woman decided it was not the torso of her half sister, as she could not find traces of moles known to be on the body of Mrs. Schapiro.

Nevertheless, Miss Nathan said before she left Boston for her home in Baltimore, Md., that she thought the police were unable to help me locate my sister, because I thought they knew where she was, but now, it seems, they admit they don't know anything about her, and they only have hearsay evidence that she is in the land of the living."

"The way in which he performed the autopsy showed he was a practiced hand, an expert.

"And when he came to disarticulate the arms and legs and sever the head, a strong, light, keen knife, not to be found in the ordinary surgeon's office, but at hand in the hospital operating room, was brought into play. The evidence showed that this knife was used. The cuts were clean, such as it would make, and in other ways em-formed to the cut made by this knife. They were not jagged, as they would have been if the largest knife to be found ordinarily in the surgeon's office had been used.

"The object in removing the internal organs was not, in my opinion, as some believed, to destroy the evidence of the use of strong drugs, but to prevent the escape of gases that might keep the torso afloat, or to remove the liquids that might have leaked through the suit case and betrayed its contents."

CHIEF SHAW HOPES TO GET ON TRAIL OF PERPETRATOR

Chief Joseph E. Shaw of the State police to-day says he has not given up hope of getting on the trail of the perpetrator of the crime.

Speaking of the chances of recovering the missing portion of the woman's body, Deputy Neal says that he has had a talk with Medical Examiner Harris relative to the chances of the dress suit case coming to the surface, if portions of the body are confined in a dress suit case at the bottom of the harbor.

"The Medical Examiner said that he thinks the decomposition of the limbs, arms and head will cause them to rise, and will cause them to rise to the surface, even if confined in the suit case, but if the case was weighted, it is an entirely different matter, and he is of the opinion that we shall recover the missing parts of the body and succeed in identifying the victim."

ONE OF MISSING GIRLS HAS BEEN FOUND IN MAINE

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 2.—Miss Florence Cobleigh, whose disappearance nearly three weeks ago led to fear that she might be the victim of the suit case murder at Winthrop, has been heard from in South Union, Me.

A souvenir postal card was received from the young woman, that being the first knowledge of her whereabouts that her parents had received since she went away.

HEBREWS CAST SINS UPON SEA ON NEW YEAR'S FIRST DAY

Photographed on Charlesbank by Boston American Photographer.)

HEBREWS READING TALMUD AND "CASTING SINS AWAY" IN ANCIENT CEREMONIAL.

Beginning of Jewish Year 5,666 Observed With Solemn Ancient Ceremony by Orthodox Believers.

Devoutly reading passages from the Talmud and chanting supplications, the greater number of Orthodox Hebrews of Boston observed the first day of their New Year with the ancient custom of casting their sins upon the seas.

Gathered at the North End Playgrounds on the banks of the Charles, the Hebrews prayed and cast their sins of the old year upon the ebbing waters, that they might start the new year, 5666, with a clean record.

The ceremonies of the Hebrew New Year date back beyond the time of Moses. They are strictly observed by young and old. Many devout Hebrews, too old to read the words in their ancient Talmud, repeated the prayers while their sons and daughters read them aloud. The tradition is a very pretty one, and is loved by the Hebrews.

Last Days of Feast.

The last days of the great feast are now being observed. Every orthodox Hebrew is free from debt to-day, and those who are not are getting free from it as quickly as possible, for it is the ambition of every good Jew to start the year with a clean sheet.

Young and old, strong and feeble, made up the crowd that gathered at the river bank in observance of the New Year's ceremony. The air was filled with the solemn chanting of passages from the Talmud. Every one of the worshippers whose eyes were not too dim to read the holy book devoutly scanned the pages of their Talmuds, and those who have grown too old to see the words repeated the phrases after their son or daughters had read them.

The Hebrew name for this observance is the feast of Tishri.

Prepare for Yom Kippur.

Hebrews in all parts of the world are preparing to observe the solemn feast of Yom Kippur, or the day of atonement. This is the time when the Jews do penance for their sins, and mourn for their dead.

It is a very solemn feast, and is strictly observed with services in synagogs and in homes. Only certain foods are used. All luxuries are abstained from, and the Hebrew puts himself in a position of penitent before his God. No orthodox Hebrew works during the feast. The day ends with a feast of rejoicing, after which the holiday season is ended and the Hebrews resume their everyday life.

Y. M. C. A. YOUTH CONFESSES TO $350,000 THEFT

Henry Leonard Arrested for Robbery of Bonds from National City Bank.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Henry Leonard, son of an ex-policeman and trusted employe of Halle and Steglitz, brokers, at No. 30 Broad street, is the young man who committed the daring robbery of $351,000 worth of securities from the National City Bank.

His name was given out to-day by Captain McCauley, head of the detective bureau, to whom he has made a complete confession. He returned $300,000 worth of the securities last week, having mailed them to the house address of Dyer Pearl, senior member of the firm of Pearl & Co., by whom they were deposited with the National City Bank as collateral.

These securities were received at Mr. Pearl's house, No. 34 West Seventy-third street. There are yet missing bonds and stocks valued at more than $50,000. Leonard has not told where the securities are hidden, but Captain McCauley expects to find them. Leonard resides with his mother at No. 580 East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. His father was Patrick Leonard, formerly connected with the Oak street police station.

Leonard belonged to the Harlem branch of the Y. M. C. A., where he was known as a quiet, ambitious young man, who studied law during his hours of leisure and seemed to lead an exemplary life.

He was arrested by Captain McCauley, Superintendent Dougherty of the Pinkerton Agency and Detective Woolridge of the Central office, at Third avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. He was taken to police headquarters, where he broke down and confessed.

SHOT, BEATEN AND ROBBED BY HIGHWAYMAN

John A. Foley of Malden Badly Injured by Thug Near Swampscott.

LYNN, Oct. 2.—While walking from Salem to Lynn John A. Foley, a printer, of No. 14 Clements street, Malden, was held up, robbed of $35, shot through the thigh, and so badly beaten that he is in the Emergency Hospital here.

Foley had reached a point about half a mile from Swampscott station when a man stepped in front of him and demanded his money. Foley refused to give it up and started to run, but the highwayman warned him to stop, threatening that if he didn't he would be "shot full of holes."

The threat failed to stop Foley, and the highwayman again shouted to him that he would "bore a hole clean through him." That was the last warning, for the next instant a pistol shot rang out and Foley fell with a bullet wound in the fleshy portion of his right thigh.

As he fell the robber ran up and struck him a terrific blow across the mouth, knocking out two of his teeth and badly lacerating his upper lip. Then the robber clubbed him on the head with the butt of the revolver, inflicting a number of bad flesh wounds. He then went through Foley's clothing, taking his wallet from an inside vest pocket.

At that stage the highwayman evidently was overcome by fear, for he stayed by Foley until the latter had recovered consciousness, after which he assisted him to his feet and told him to keep going for Lynn. He said he himself was going to walt where he was until a companion, who was to be expected, should appear.

Foley made his way to the office of Dr. H. E. Bickwell, in Swampscott, who dressed the wound, afterward telephoning for the chiefs of the Swampscott police. The latter immediately started to investigate, sending word to Chief Fields of Salem. Both forces have detailed a posse to search the woods and hold up all freight trains during the night in an effort to capture the robber.

POLICE CLUB LABORERS AT PANAMA CANAL

Men Under Contract Prefer Death to Working in the Zone.

COLON, Oct. 2.—Six hundred and fifty laborers from Martinique, brought here on the French steamer Versailles under contract to work on the canal, refused to disembark or submit to vaccination, which is imperative under the American sanitary regulations.

They consented to be taken back to Martinique, saying that they had been misinformed as to the conditions here before they embarked, and that inter ther learned these conditions were intolerable and deadly.

Finally 500 of them were persuaded to land, and these were sent to points along the line of the canal. One hundred and fifty remained on board the ship.

These were forcibly ejected from the vessel by Panaman and canal zone policemen, but not until nearly every one of them had been clubbed and several were bleeding from nasty wounds.

Preferred Death.

The captain of the Versailles told the men he was ready to take back to Martinique all those who were able to pay their passage, but the men argued that the French government would be willing to reimburse the steamship company and that they themselves were penniless.

At the intance of M. Ravel, the agent of the company, and of the French consul, a squad of twelve Panaman police went on board the vessel and told the men that force would be used if they persisted in their refusal to disembark.

Seeing that the police were armed with bayonets and guns, the men bared their breasts and said they preferred death rather than be taken ashore.

Governor Melendez, Mayor Andrion, the chief of police and others argued with the men, but again without effect. Ten additional policemen arrived at the wharf, but the Governor, wishing to avoid bloodshed and considering that the police force was insufficient, telegraphed to President Amador, asking permission to use the canal zone police, to which the President consented.

At 2 o'clock the laborers were informed that they would be given two hours to reconsider their decision, and at 4 o'clock those of them connected to disembark, the others still holding out. Then the Panaman police began to club right and left. The zone police a few minutes later assisted in the clubbing, but with better judgment and less bullet-thinning.

About fifty of the laborers leaped into the sea, but all of them were able to swim. The captain, however, lowered a boat, which picked them up. Nearly every man had received blows, and several of them were bleeding from their wounds.

At 5 o'clock all the laborers, who were in a pitiable condition, were placed on board a train which left for Coronal, where they will be put to work.

ROOSEVELT LAUDS LOOMIS AS HE RETIRES

By Request President Writes That Hay Disapproved All of Bowen's Charges.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—Francis B. Loomis retires to-day from the State department, where he has been first assistant secretary and acting secretary, and Elihu Root assumes actively the duties of Secretary of State.

Loomis, who will return to private life, appealed to President Roosevelt to state his recollection of John Hay's opinion of the retiring first assistant secretary, and of Herbert W. Bowen, who was dismissed from his post as minister to Venezuela for reasons of serious allegations which he had brought against Loomis.

At the time it was widely published that Secretary Hay disliked and distrusted Loomis, and that the last official act of the Secretary's life was to visit the White House to get the president not to dismiss Bowen, but to dismiss Loomis.

Roosevelt's Letter.

Mr. Roosevelt's reply, written two days after Loomis's request, read as follows:

"I desire to state in the broadest and most emphatic manner that the statement you quote as appearing in certain newspapers as to the supposed indifference or opinion between myself and the Secretary of State, Mr. Hay, in respect to the action taken by me regarding Mr. Bowen in connection with the charges against you, is not merely without foundation in fact, but is the direct reverse of the truth.

"You were appointed Assistant Secretary of State upon Mr. Hay's suggestion and request. He never spoke to me about you save with respect, and he expressed to me very great regret that you were going to leave the service, and stated that he had hoped that you would stay in it as long as he did, and that he would find it difficult to get anyone in your place whom he would like so much.

Hay Condemned Bowen.

"Not only did he express himself about Mr. Bowen to me in the language you quote him as having used at about the same time to you in speaking of Mr. Bowen, but he condemned Mr. Bowen in stronger terms than those which you quote him as having used, and dwelt upon the fact of what he called the treachery and disloyalty of Mr. Bowen to the Government and to him (Mr. Hay), repeating again and again that most of the charges Mr. Bowen had made were really not charges against you at all, but against himself (Mr. Hay), and that Mr. Bowen, of course, knew this.

"But this was not all. Mr. Hay then did what he rarely, indeed, did. He expressed his strong dissent from the action I had taken in indorsing Mr. Taft's report as regards even the mild request of which it contained, stating that he disagreed with both Mr. Taft and myself on this point and felt that you were in no way blameworthy, and that the only action that had been called for was the dismissal of Mr. Bowen and the announcement of your entire vindication."

UNCLE FURNISHES BAIL FOR MORRILL

A wealthy uncle came to the rescue of Raleigh R. Morrill, nephew of the late Senator Justin Morrill of Vermont, the Technology student who was arrested on the charge of extensive thefts while engaged as baggage clerk on the New Haven road and gave bail for him to the amount of $5000. The uncle and other relatives who have been seen in regard to the young man's alleged conduct attribute it to a condition brought on from over study, if he has done what's wrong.

Miss Anna Sullivan, Grafton square.
Charles Lamkin, Boston.

WORCESTER, Oct. 2.—Unshackled from a freight train in some unknown manner, a rapidly moving freight car crashed into a heavily freighted electric car on the Grafton street railroad crossing, injuring eleven passengers. The electric was thrown from the track and demolished.

The trolley car was on the Providence Street Division of the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway. Motorman George H. Gardner and Conductor Edward Rice were in charge.

The car had passed one set of tracks and reached the Boston & Albany freight tracks as the runaway freight car suddenly appeared from behind a string of cars going at a fast clip. Before the motorman could reverse, the freight car crashed into the electric.

The loaded electric car was knocked from the rails. The glass in the windows was broken and the cars were torn. The passengers shrieked in pain and fright and many of the women passengers fainted. Ambulances were summoned and the injured persons were taken to their homes.

The motorman of the colliding car said the freight car had broken away from a train in Hamilton, bound for Springfield, and in charge of Conductor Lord and Engineer Nevin.

HILL MAKES LAST FIGHT TO SAVE PATRICK

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The motion of Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of aged William M. Rice in this city, for a reargument of his case comes up for hearing to-day, the condemned man being represented by Ex-Senator David B. Hill.

The fight for life made by Patrick has been one of the most persistent in the records of criminal jurisprudence. While Rice died on September 23, 1900, Patrick was not arrested until October 4, and then he was not accused of murder, but of forging the dead man's name to checks. Weeks passed before the capital offense was formally laid at his door, and it was not until January 23, 1901, that he was arraigned before Recorder Goff. The trial was one of the longest in the history of the State. It was March 27 when a verdict of guilty was rendered.

For more than three years the condemned man has been in the death house at Sing Sing and has experienced in that time a terrific chair August 10 last, but an appeal for a re-opening of his case served as a stay. Up to date the case has cost the State of New York upwards of a quarter of a million dollars.

Vatican Stirred Over Reported Attention to Arch-Enemy of Roman Catholic Church.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—Author itative information as to the amount of attention accorded at Manila by Miss Alice Roosevelt to Archbishop Aglipay, head of the apostolic delegate at Manila, or the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in that place.

While Miss Roosevelt's dalliance properly has no political or diplomatic significance, Europeans and Asiatics are unable to reconcile that the daughter of the President has no official position.

It was carefully explained by Mr. Taft that his stop at Tokio had no diplomatic significance, but other persons knowing that the Japanese were making preparations to give and entertain him and Miss Roosevelt, felt that the Far East would attach diplomatic import to the visit.

Archbishop Aglipay was formerly a major general in the Roman Catholic Church. During the American occupation of the Philippines the religious orders were all deported. In the native insurrection which followed the taking of the islands by the Americans the natives set up the cry, "Down with the friars! Down with the friars! Turns out the friars!" The United States government purchased the friar lands and the church property, and the friars, from the islands, their places being taken by American priests.

The representative of the Vatican is Mgr. Algisi, who is English by education.

A LOVELY COMPLEXION

New York Lady Proves That Every Woman May Have It By

USING CUTICURA SOAP

Mrs. R. Reichenberg, wife of the well-known jeweller of 146 Fulton St., New York, says: "I had a friend who was justly proud of her complexion. When asked what gave her such a brilliant and lovely complexion, she replied, 'A healthy woman can be sure of a fine skin if she will do as I do, use plenty of Cuticura Soap and water.' She insisted that I follow her example, which I did with speedy conviction. I find that Cuticura Soap keeps the skin soft, white, and clear, and prevents redness and roughness."

ANCIENTS IN BATTLE GARB BEGIN MARCH ON ALBANY

Doughty Company Leaves Boston at Mercy of Foes to Celebrate Fealty Day.

The Ancients are off for Albany.

Glorious in uniforms that drove the sun behind the clouds, and led by the American Watch Company Band of Waltham, the sleekest crowd of Ancients that ever left Boston marched from the company's armory in Faneuil Hall to the South Station, where they boarded the 8:20 express for the New York capital.

This was the beginning of the company's 258th annual field day. The Ancients have mapped out a program that includes a lot of red paint, fireworks and sensations for the people of Albany. Every one of the 250 men who made up the party has gone away with the determination to support the gun record of the Ancients as the most lavish of entertainers and appreciative of guests.

Just before they left Faneuil Hall, Sergeant Irving Vose was presented an Ancients' saber by Commander William A. Morse, on behalf of the company. This is Mr. Vose's first day as an officer.

The Ancients will start parading Albany to-night. On their arrival they will be met by the Seventh Battalion of the Fourth Regiment of the New York National Guard. They will be led on a short parade about the city, ending at the City Hall, where Mayor Gaus will surrender the city.

The Albany officers of the National Guard will be their hosts to-night at a banquet. To-morrow all who feel like it will take in the sights of Albany. The Ancients will banquet the Albany officers at the Hotel Ten Eyck to-morrow night and Wednesday they will go down the Hudson River to New York, whence they will come to Boston via the Fall River Line.

Because of their band being a non-union organization some trouble with the Albany union men with whom they will come in contact is feared. The bands which escort the Albany military companies have threatened not to parade if the Waltham band leads the Ancients, and the union employes of the Hotel Ten Eyck threaten trouble.

PROPRIETOR OF STRANDED CIRCUS HELD

Joseph T. McCaddon Accused of Violating French Bankruptcy Laws.

ARRESTED AT STEAMER

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Joseph T. McCaddon, who was at the head of the McCaddon shows which became stranded in France, was arraigned to-day in the Bow street police court and remanded for further hearing, under bail.

The charges against McCaddon grow out of the failure of his circus, and the warrant for his arrest was issued at the request of the French authorities, as he is accused of violating the French bankruptcy laws.

McCaddon was arrested just as he was boarding the American line steamer St. Louis to take the remains of his wife, who died in London, home for burial. He appeared in court to-day dressed in mourning. He said his arrest was cruel, as his affairs were well known to the French police and he had made no attempt at secrecy. He would have stopped at Cherbourg in any event, where he could have been taken by the French authorities.

2 KILLED FIRST DAY OF HUNTING

Blacklock swung the gun over his arm, pointing the muzzle backward, and struck the hammer. The gun was discharged, young Howarth's face, and the boy died in a few hours.

M'CALL DENIES THAT HE SPOKE OF THREAT

DECLARES HE DID NOT SAY HE HAD BEEN ORDERED TO RETURN CAMPAIGN MONEY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—President John A. McCall, of the New York Life Insurance Company, is involved in another question of veracity.

He has denied the assertion of one of the six insurance commissioners now here conducting an independent investigation, that he told them that he had been called upon by Attorney General Mayer to return to the treasury of the New York Life the money paid out for political campaign purposes, under penalty of being sued.

President McCall, at his Summer home, would not discuss the affair, but his son made this response, as authorized by his father:

"President McCall has not discussed with the commissioner from any State, nor with any other person, any question that has come out in the investigation, nor will he do so until the investigation is ended."

The younger McCall said it was useless to carry any further message to his father, who would add nothing to the denial quoted.

Private Investigation.

The commissioners here are R. E. Polk of Tennessee, who has been elected chairman; H. R. Pruett of Kentucky, J. N. Host of Wisconsin, T. D. O'Brien of Minnesota and J. L. Pierce of Nebraska. A sixth commissioner is J. W. Clay of Texas.

The commissioners are pursuing their own investigation, because they do not want to depend on what the legislative inquiry unearths as a basis for making the New York life conform to the laws of their respective States. Their research will be expanded to the Equitable and Mutual Life eventually, five or six months being allowed for the work.

The clergy are in stern and determined revolt against corruption and theft in high places. Their strong hands have reached up to tear from pedestals the heroes of high finance and the politicians who have abused their power.

Rev. A. Lincoln Moore, at the Riverside Baptist Church, not only preached a stirring sermon, denouncing "Graft" in high places, but announced that he had personally engaged a lawyer and would at once institute proceedings to compel the resignations of John A. McCall and George W. Perkins from their offices in the New York Life and start suit to force restitution.

J. Mortimer Chew, whose vigorous anti-graft resolutions caused Bishop Potter to insist on their modification, is carrying on a part of the crusade in Newburgh, and Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, in New York, joined the war with an invocation, praying that the hands of New York's officials should be strengthened for the fight.

Asked to Lead Fight.

Rev. Dr. Moore announced that he would be in conference with Rev. Dr. Charles E. Hyatt, of No. 45 Nassau street, relative to beginning action against McCall and Perkins. Both are fellow-directors and as directors of the New York Life Insurance company.

"I have received hundreds of letters from policy holders in the New York Life, from all parts of the country," he said. "I have been asked to lead the fight of the policy holders against McCall and Perkins and the corrupt methods that have disgraced the conduct of this great corporation. I have accepted with the profound belief that I should use every effort in my power in force the removal from office of both McCall and Perkins and compel them, through the courts, to return the $150,000 that was unlawfully contributed to the Republican campaign fund.

Rev. J. M. Chew, of Newburgh, refuses to consider that he stands alone in his attitude toward "graft methods" and the life insurance grafters. In his sermon he defended the resolutions he introduced at the convention of the Episcopal diocese and spoke of Bishop Potter's objections. He continued: "Since the return from the convention I have received numerous letters of approval from men in all walks of life, including one from the rector of one of the very largest and wealthiest churches in New York, whose name is a power in the financial world in this country, saying that the resolutions were 'admirable and timely,' and that they would have been glad to second them, but had left the convention before I offered a church engagement before they were presented."

Dr. Parkhurst started a campaign against the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, by preaching from the police, the Mayor and the President.

OLD IRONSIDES TO REMAIN IN BOSTON

Congressman John F. Fitzgerald, who obtained in 1897 an appropriation of $10,000 to repair the historic frigate Constitution, in order that it might be removed from Portsmouth to Boston, wrote to the Navy Department at Washington protesting against the Brooks scheme to get the old vessel there, and has received a communication stating that the unseaworthy condition of the vessel would not permit its removal.

HACKETT GIRL'S MOTHER NOW GOES ARMED

Both She and Her Elder Daughter Now Fear Threats of Death.

EXPECT ARREST THIS WEEK

READFIELD, Me., Oct. 2.—No arrest has yet been made in the Hackett murder case, but Detective Martin feels that he is nearing the end of success and that before another week has passed the strangler of Mattie Hackett will be locked safely behind the bars. Martin is closely guarded in what he says about the case, and declines to state, except in a general way, what progress he is making.

Mrs. Hackett, mother of the murdered girl, is terribly unnerved over threats which have been made against her. She has called home her elder daughter, who has been working in one of the hotels in the White Mountains, and both women are armed with revolvers, with which in this protection they dare not leave the house after dark.

TO ASK $50,000 TO BUY CAR FOR THE PRESIDENT

This Will Be Done so That the Chief Executive Will Not Be Under Obligations.

ANNUAL SUM FOR EXPENSES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—As a result of the criticism of the custom of railways furnishing private cars for the use of Presidents of the United States when traveling on official or semi-official business, a bill will be introduced at the coming session of Congress to provide an appropriation of $50,000 for the building of a private car, and an annual sum for maintenance for transportation, so that the chief executive will not be under any obligation to railroads.

Senators and representatives are allowed exorbitant mileage, and it is a notorious fact that many of them travel upon passes given by the railroads and pocket the mileage allowed by Congress appropriation. Army and navy officers and all other officials of the government are allowed their expenses while traveling. The President is not allowed any mileage and his expenses are paid out of the private purse.

The legislators who intend to advocate this appropriation say that the President of the United States, for the safety of his own person, should not be compelled to run unnecessary risk by travelling in an ordinary coach.

President Roosevelt has decided that he will never again accept these courtesies at the hands of the railways.

WOMAN DYING OF DRUG KEEPS NAME SECRET

Arrested as Intoxicated She Is Found at Hospital to Have Taken Poison.

Charged with intoxication, but apparently suffering from some poison, a mysterious woman, giving the name of Mrs. Hutchin son, which she admitted was assumed, is now in the City Hospital. The chances of her recovery are slight. Besides the mark of bit of lettering about her clothing had been carefully removed and she steadfastly refuses to say anything that will enlighten the police as to her identity.

She was arrested in the down town district. She is handsome, well dressed, about thirty or thirty-two years old, and has light hair and blue eyes.

The physicians at the hospital have, as yet, been unable to determine the nature of the poison she has taken. She was hardly able to speak when arrested, and grew rapidly worse. Her condition was considered serious enough to arouse the authorities to action in an effort to learn her name and her friends, but she will not aid them in any way.

PRIEST FLAYS 'AUTOMADNESS'

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 2.—Reckless automobile operators were denounced by Rev. P. J. McDonnell, speaking from the pulpit of St. Mel's Roman Catholic Church.

Fr. McDonnell's utterances were prompted by the accident almost at the door of the church a few minutes before the vesper services. Mrs. Bridget Hannon, a widow, seventy-five years old, was run down. She was crossing the street to enter the church, of which she is a member. Her injuries were severe, and she was carried to the priest's house.

Fr. McDonnell called reckless automobile operators cowards, and demanded that laws against "auto madness" be enforced.

SERIOUSLY INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

KEENE, N. H., Oct. 2.—R. M. Burnett, an extract manufacturer of Smithboro, Mass., is seriously injured as the result of an automobile accident at Swanzey Mills. When coming down a steep hill near Swanzey Mills the springs of the car, a forty-five horse power machine, broke.

The car went into the ditch, struck a telephone pole and a stone wall. Mr. Burnett sustained a fracture of the collar bone and bad scalp wounds.

CREDITORS WORRY OVER MISSING GEM DEALER

YOUNG BOSTON MAN OBTAINED $40,000 WORTH OF STOCK FOR STORE.

Joseph Alpert, a young man who, his creditors assert, secured diamonds and jewelry valued at between $30,000 and $40,000 on credit, and who has floated notes and passed checks which are being repudiated, is missing from his home in this city, and his creditors are anxiously seeking him.

Alpert conducted a small jewelry store at No. 5 Endicott street. He is only twenty-four years of age, but has been in the jewelry business several years, and is considered thoroughly honest, as he always paid bills promptly. This promptness made the big wholesale houses trust him. He bought on credit, obtaining great amounts of diamonds and jewelry on that account.

When the young man left his store September 15 he declared openly that he was going on a business trip, as he was in the habit of doing. When nothing was heard from him after several days, and when many of his creditors began to feel anxious about their money, a search was begun for him. His wife says she does not know where he is.

The missing man is described as being five feet six or seven inches tall, weighs 125 to 130 pounds, has black hair, dark eyes and sallow complexion. It is believed that he will be located shortly and will probably be brought back to Boston.

His creditors, who have taken notes on their losses, are unable yet to say just what the losses will be. They will mount up into the thousands in some cases. The creditors are: Smith, Patterson & Co., 5 Hanover street; Percival & Co., 1 Adelbert, A. S. Hirschberg, all of the jewelers' building, Washington street; Kaliski Bros., Bowdoin square; M. S. Paige & Co., A. Rosenberg, A. Gordon and Solomon Bros., of Salem street; Henry Savage, 106 Hanover street; A. E. Glover, A. Wyeth, Boston, and J. Reuben, Washington street, are among them.

M. S. Paige & Co. is probably the heaviest loser, as Alpert not only procured diamonds and jewelry, but a considerable amount of cash on checks, making a total of several thousand dollars.

EDUCATOR CALLS JOHN D. 'DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE'

Professor Parsons Says One Side of the Oil Magnate Deserves Monument; the Other Jail.

John D. Rockefeller as "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," one side of him "deserving a monument, while the other side ought to be in jail," was discussed at length by Prof. Frank Parsons, head of the school of the Breadwinners' College. The reference to the Standard Oil magnate occurred in the course of an address on the question, "Is Rockefeller a Good Man? The Remedy for Insurance Graft, etc."

Incidentally Prof. Parsons gave the gathering a table of principles which he guaranteed would bring happiness into their lives.

Speaking of the "surprise party" given to Rockefeller by a large number of his friends and neighbors in Cleveland to express their confidence and appreciation, the professor said:

"These people say that Rockefeller is a kindly man who has done a great deal for the church, helped the poor, and given millions to found a great university. Other people say that the records of courts and legislative investigations prove that Rockefeller and his Standard Oil associates have been guilty of gross frauds and violations of law, taking millions of rebates and other favors from the railroads, breaking up independent pipe lines or plugging them in the dark, and stopping at nothing to ruin their competitors and defeat the law, even resorting to the bribing up of a civil refinery and the commission of the crime of perjury.

Man of Two Natures.

"May it not be that both these opinions truly represent the facts on which they are based? There are two natures in each of us, a good nature and a bad one, and sometimes both are strongly developed in different spheres of activity as with the doctor in Stevenson's famous novel, 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' May not Mr. Rockefeller be a case of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde?' One side of him may deserve a monument while the other side ought to be in jail.

"Two remedies were suggested for insurance graft: (1) Government insurance at cost, as in New Zealand, where the clean, cheap, safe, non-forfeitable, profit-sharing insurance is managed by the state but not in competition with English and American companies.

What Employers Ask.

Miss Diana Hirschler, social secretary at Filene's, spoke on the subject, "What Questions Employers Ask About Young Men and Women Who Seek Employment." She said employers want to know about character, intelligence and skill. The applicant must be honest, for a dishonest employee is unprofitable. He must be truthful, sober, steady, prompt, industrious. The employer also asks how much time he has had, what experience he has, and whether he is intelligent and se cent enough to carry out orders quickly and accurately.

Among the guests were Secretary Abrahams of the Central Labor Union, and Henry Abbott, secretary of the Typographical Union, who came as a visiting committee from the Central Labor Union, and Wilson L. Gill, the distinguished originator of the school system of vocational training which is now being inaugurated in some of the Boston schools.

Life Principles That Will Insure Happiness

Express your appreciation before the funeral. If the bread your mother bakes is good, say so. If the conductor on a street car calls the streets clearly and in a pleasant and gentlemanly, tell him you think he is a good conductor. If you think a newspaper you read is doing a good work in any way, write to the editor and tell him so. Show your appreciation by word and act day by day, instead of waiting to put it all into flowers and funeral expenses.

Perspire daily. It is a moral duty to perspire at least once a day to keep the 9,000,000 pores open and in good working order.

Bathe every day, even if you only take a rubdown with a sponge and a coarse towel.

Seek the truth, not victory, in dispute. Listen to the other fellow, hear all sides, and don't dogmatize.

From rules given by Professor Frank Parsons in address at Breadwinners' College.

200 PEOPLE TRY TO SEE ROOM OF THEODORE, JR.

Such a Crowd of Curious Visit Cleverly that Owners Refuse Admittance.

The rooms occupied by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., in Cleverly Hall, at Cambridge, were the object of curious exhibit for the delection of curious strangers. Orders have been issued by the owners that strangers shall not be shown through the building when their evident purpose is simply to see the room where the President's son lives. Over 200 persons appeared on Sunday and the janitor was kept busy showing them up to the floor on which Roosevelt's room is. Later the janitor said:

"People must think I'm a fool to know that at least 200 people have called here to-day and asked to be allowed to look at young Roosevelt's room. Such idiots I have never seen. Why, I think if he stayed out of sight they would soon get tired of his game. The owners have warned us that if we let in any more strangers the room we will be discharged."

MITCHELL TO SEE PRESIDENT

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 2.—By invitation, President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers will call on President Roosevelt to-morrow.

He does not know particularly what the President wants to see him about, but it is surmised here that it is in connection with the possibility of avoiding a strike in the anthracite region next spring.

Mr. Mitchell leaves to-day for New York to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Civic Federation. To-night he will leave New York for Washington to keep the appointment with President Roosevelt.

NEW CONSUL IN PARIS.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Frank H. Mason, the new United States consul general, succeeding John K. Gowdy, assumed charge of the consulate to-day.

NEW LIGHT IS THROWN ON THE CHASE MYSTERY

Leonard Phillips, Brother of Dead Woman, Gives Police Important Facts.

Important developments in the mystery of the death of Mrs. Jessie A. Chase, at Swampscott, have come to light as the result of a conference between Leonard Phillips, brother of Mrs. Chase, and Chief of Police Harris, and the new facts thus obtained will at once be laid before District Attorney Peters.

The new facts relate chiefly to the home life of the dead woman. We have learned through Mr. Phillips a great deal that would have been impossible to obtain any other way, and Chief Harris says he is satisfied before many facts that will not be published until after they have been told to District Attorney Peters.

Joseph Cronin, a colored woman, formerly a maid in the Chase family, is expected to-day to make some new light upon the alleged suicide's home life. She was interviewed by Chief Harris and Lieut. Described in detail the strain under which Mrs. Chase labored.

Chief Harris is awaiting the report of the chemical analysis made of the organs of Mrs. Chase, also the result of the examination by experts of her letters. Each partisan will be made between these and the letter found at her side after she died.

The condition of DeForrest Woodruff Chase, the husband, is also said to be an important factor in the case. He is now dangerously ill as the result of his drunken orgies. He is to go to Dr. Chase, husband of the dead woman.

ZIONISTS DENY DOWIE'S ILLNESS

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 2.—John Alexander Dowie and party, of Chicago, arrived here en route to the proposed Zionist colony in the state of Mexico. Members of the party deny that Dowie has been stricken with paralysis, but they admit he is ill.

CRUSHED IN FREIGHT WRECK.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—In a bad freight wreck just above the junction of the Northampton division and the main line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, Engineer James Dunkin had both ankles fractured and Brakeman Thomas Kresnahan was hurt by being thrown from the caboose.

ROOSEVELT DECIDES ON TRIP TO SOUTH

President to Visit New Orleans October 26, to Leave Same Evening.

TO COME BACK BY SEA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The President to-day definitely decided to visit New Orleans on his Southern trip. He will arrive in the Crescent City on the morning of Thursday, the 26th, and will leave that evening on a cruiser, making the trip to Washington by sea in order to obviate the quarantine regulations of the Southern ports.

No Cabinet members will be with him, nor will Mrs. Roosevelt accompany the party on the Southern trip.

The official party will disband at Little Rock, and only Secretary Loeb will accompany the President to New Orleans. He will reach Washington on the 31st.

DROP SEARCH FOR CONVICT

BRIDGEWATER, Oct. 2.—After a search in person, which covered every square mile in several counties, and a telephone from Neponset to New Bedford, the authorities have abandoned the hunt for Elmer St. Clair Francis, the insane negro convict, who escaped from the State Farm on September 17. It is believed by Dr. Ellot that Francis has gone beyond the State line.

Women living in isolated homes had their fears increased when they learned that the man was no longer being sought for and they will dare to venture forth after nightfall. There is no fear in the present whereabouts of Frank R. Wiley, white, who escaped from the State Farm with the negro.

UNCONSCIOUS FOR 100 HOURS

Mrs. Isabel M. Donnelly, wife of Hugh Donnelly of Chelsea, has been unconscious since Wednesday evening, suffering from concussion of the brain, and the doctors are puzzled over the case.

Patients suffering from concussion of the brain usually die or regain consciousness within a few hours or die. Mrs. Donnelly, however, has been unconscious for more than a hundred hours, and the physicians say she will recover.

Mrs. Donnelly was struck by an electric car on Ferry street, Everett, and two days later was identified. Dr. W. W. Kingsbury of the Malden Hospital, says it is the most unusual case of concussion of the brain that he has ever known.

JOYS OF MATERNITY

A WOMAN'S BEST HOPES REALIZED

Mrs. Potts Tells How Women Should Prepare for Motherhood

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to a displacement of the womb or lack of strength in the generative organs.

Mrs. Anna Potts

Frequent backache and distressing pains, accompanied by offensive discharges that generally follow irregular and scanty menstruation indicate a displacement or nerve degeneration of the womb and surrounding organs.

The question that troubles women is how can a woman who has some form of trouble bear healthy children?

Mrs. Anna Potts, of 510 Park Avenue, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

My Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

During the early part of my married life I was delicate in health; both my husband and I were very anxious for a child to bless our home, but I had two miscarriages, and could not carry a child to maturity. A neighbor had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it. I did so and soon felt that I was growing stronger, my headaches and backaches left me, I had no more hemorrhages or pains, and felt like a new woman. Within a year I became the mother of a strong, healthy child, the first born. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certainly a splendid tonic, and I wish every woman who wants to become a mother would try it."

Actual sterility in woman is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free to expectant or would-be mothers.

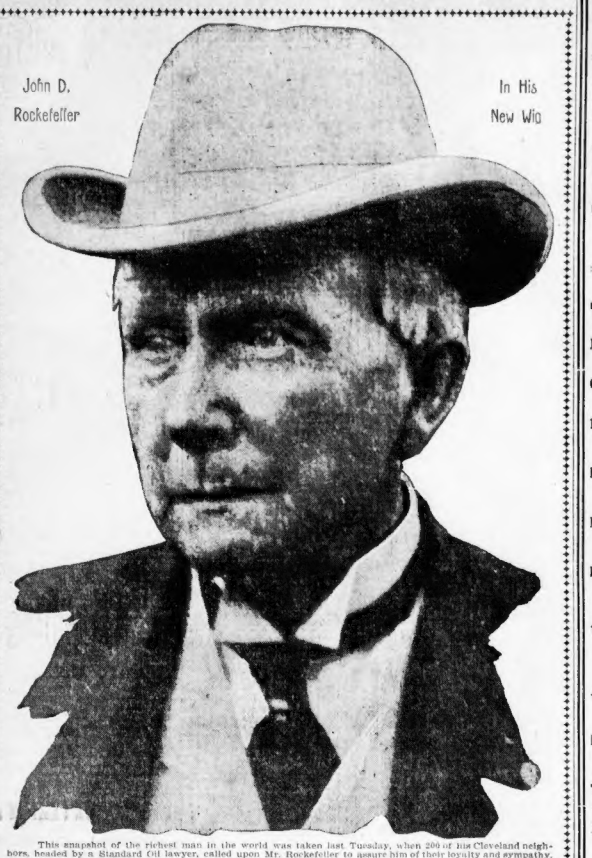
ON HAPPIEST DAY OF HIS LIFE ROCKEFELLER GIVES $2 AWAY



This snapshot of the richest man in the world was taken last Tuesday, when 200 of his Cleveland neighbors, headed by a Standard Oil lawyer, called upon Mr. Rockefeller to assure him of their loyalty and sympathy.

Oil King Rejoices That His Wife Is Able to Attend Church Again.

Makes Ragged Urchins Happy With Gift and Jokes With Sunday School Members.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 2.—"This is the happiest day of my life," said John D. Rockefeller, as he emerged from the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, where he was the central figure of a rally of the Sunday School.

Arriving at church, he saw two urchins, brother and sister, in ragged clothes, standing near the door. Approaching them, he patted each on the back, asked their names and gave each a dollar. Then he invited them into the Sunday School, but they refused to accompany him.

Mr. Rockefeller was called upon for a speech. He said: "Well, boys and girls, I welcome you up here with the older folks. Here we are all together. We're all welcome, all of us, aren't we? We must welcome Mrs. Rockefeller, too. She is here to-day. You know she has been sick and couldn't be with us for almost two years.

"I don't know very much about Christian Science, but I do know she has been taking the absent treatment, that for two years she has thought of us every day, and I'm sure we've thought of her.

"There was once a little boy, just like you down there in the front row. He didn't like things as they were. He dreamed one night he had made a world where there was no Sunday school. He thought he liked it, but soon began to miss something. He took the matter to heart. Somebody asked if he had made that world.

"'Yes,' he answered, tearfully, 'but I'll never do it again.'"

The story brought down the audience, old and young alike. The applause was deafening. Children jumped up and down in the seats and stamped on the floor. Mr. Rockefeller laughed heartily at the demonstration. The noise lasted several minutes.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., UNABLE TO ATTEND CLASS MEETING

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., did not attend the meeting of his Bible class as had been generally expected. There was a large attendance of young men at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, principally because it was believed that Mr. Rockefeller would be there to greet them. Mr. Richardson, who took the young millionaire's place, said:

"I saw our leader this morning and he hoped to be here to greet and welcome you. But it was decreed best that he should not attempt it. That he will return to us in the near future we all hope."

FIVE BURNED IN AUTO FIRE.

STAMFORD, Ct., Oct. 2.—Five persons were burned more or less seriously here when the steam automobile of H. O. Garrison, a New York business man, of Outclair, N. J., took fire. They are: Frank Mechaire, Walter Greeney and Leo Parker, of Stamford; Bertram De[illegible] of Brooklyn, and Gordon Warner, Stamford, chauffeur.

AGED GROOM SUES FAMILY FOR $10,000

Says They Imprisoned Him to Prevent Marriage to Girl of 24 Years.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Oct. 2.—Wealthy Columbus Huling, eighty-two, of North Bennington, whose recent marriage to Miss Jennie Bissell, twenty-four, attracted wide spread attention and was brought about only after quite a legal struggle by nephews and nieces to prevent it, has brought suit against C. Floyd Huling, a nephew; Mrs. C. H. Mason of this village, a niece; her husband, C. H. Mason; Edward B. Huling of Chicago and Deputy Sheriff John Nash of this village for $10,000 damages, alleging false imprisonment.

The false imprisonment is alleged to have taken place in Manchester, Arlington, North Bennington and this village. A claim of assault by Deputy Sheriff Nash is made to cover the plea that he went to North Bennington and arrested Mr. Huling on the charge of intoxication, a complaint that was never carried further.

Another time, it is declared, Mr. Huling was kept in a hotel in this village under the restraint of Mr. Nash. A keeper and guardian were also in charge of him for twelve days, placed over him at the request of the nephews and the nieces. He was afterward discharged by the probate court and the same day was married.

$20,000 LOSS IN EARLY FIRE IN ROXBURY

Block of Stores on Warren Street, Owned by Everett Man, Burns.

A block of five one-story stores on Warren street, Roxbury, between Maywood and Edgewood streets, was destroyed by fire to-day. The loss was about $20,000.

The fire started in the bakery of Gustave Haas and communicated to a Chinese laundry. From there it spread to John T. Connor's grocery store, a tailor shop and the Quincy Market.

The buildings were owned by Frank M. Carpenter, of Everett. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The blaze was so fierce and the smoke so dense when the firemen arrived that a second alarm was turned in from Box 265, while a third was pulled in from a nearby box by someone who did not know the firemen were already there.

The building was completely gutted. Every occupant of the block suffered much damage.

Those who occupied the building were Victor Heath, pool room; W. S. Huntley, carpenter shop; Quincy Market; H. P. Goodwin, periodical store; L. Green, tailor; Long Kee, laundry; Gustave Haas, bakery; J. T. Connor Corporation, grocery store.

MOSQUITOES SPREAD LOVE

NIGHT FISHING BRINGS DEATH

LE SUEUR, Minn., Oct. 2.—Dr. B. B. Norland, of Wheatley, a firm adherent of the theory that yellow fever is disseminated my mosquitos, maintains that the rapidity with which marriage engagements are formed in the Summer is attributable to the influence of the mosquito, which bites young couples alternately and thus inoculates the shy maiden and the aspiring swain.

He studied this subject many years, and discovered that in direct proportion as the houses where marriageable young women live have the porches screened with mosquito netting in the Summer do the engagements of these young women thus protected fall off.

He earnestly advises young men desiring to marry to keep away from mosquito netting and seek to spread the courtship microbe in the open.

NATICK, Oct. 2.—William Gibbons, sixty years old, of No. 141 East Central street, was drowned while fishing during the night. Shortly after daylight a woman living on the river road noticed a fishing rod and a hat lying on the bank. She recognized them as belonging to Mr. Gibbons. She became alarmed because he didn't come to claim the property and telephoned to the police. Chief Brown found the body floating.

Since May, Gibbons has not missed fishing in the Charles River at least once in forty-eight hours, and he missed a day he always went at night. It is supposed that he was fishing from a boat, fell overboard and was drowned.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL 96 BOSTON, MASS.

Nominations of officers of the Boston Central Labor Union have been made and follows: President, Martin T. Joyce of the Electrical Workers; vice-president, Peter H. McNealy of the teamsters; secretary-treasurer, Philip H. Sweet of the coopers; recording and corresponding secretary, Henry Abrahams of the cigarmakers; assistant secretaries, Arthur Clarke of the grocery and provision clerks; auditors, Miss Anna Bowen of the cigar strippers; P. D. Daley of the carriage drivers; J. J. Barry of the theatrical stage employes, and Dennis D. Driscoll of the horseshoers; trustees, Frank H. McCarthy of the cigarmakers, George Tagen of the furniture and piano movers, C. T. Scott of the coopers; provision clerks, Daniel Gallagher of the amalgamated carpenters, Dennis D. Driscoll of the horseshoers, and P. J. Maloney of the theatrical stage employes.

Delegates to the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor were instructed to urge the promotion of the wood workers' label.

The bill now before the Legislature in behalf of working women and children, presented by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, was referred to a committee comprising Henry Sterling, Dennis D. Driscoll and Frank B. Foster.

Information of the working of the initiative and referendum in this State was asked through a communication from the Pennsylvania State Federation.

In consequence of the building laborers' international body declaring that the circular that Boston breweries are unfair, it was voted to notify all the local unions of labor and that every member of the movement was in error, and that Boston breweries are fair to union labor.

Delegates from the Chandelier Workers' Union were seated.

Professor Frank Parsons, Ph. D., delivered an address on "Current Events, Especially Life Insurance."

Electrical Workers.

Several of the employers have signed the new agreement with the Electrical Workers' Union, and the total of anticipated strike of the 700 members of the union, an early settlement of the affair is expected. Several employers are still pending between the committee representing the union and that representing the employers.

In the new agreement that the union has offered, forty-four hours a week are asked for instead of forty-eight, also fifty cents an hour instead of forty-five.

Printers' Eight-Hour Day.

Unless the master printers of Boston desist from taking in work from offices in other cities where strikes have been declared the present agreement between Typographical Union No. 13 and the employers will be nullified. The union claims that there are at least three shops in Boston which are taking work from shops that have strikes in other cities. This, it is contended, is in direct violation of the agreement between the employers and the union.

The agreement binds until February 1. Although announcement of a universal eight-hour day, to go into effect on May 1, has been made, the present working conditions in Boston will continue until February 1, provided the employers do not violate the agreement before that time. Should this latter happen the union will demand the eight-hour day on May 1. The shorter day will be demanded on February 1 anyway.

Six hundred and fifty book and job printers at least will be benefited by the shorter day. There are between 200 and 250 book and job printers who, though not members of the union, benefit by the work of the union. The 700 printers employed on the newspapers of Boston will not be benefited, directly, as their schedule now calls for forty-eight hours. These are, however, prepared to aid the book and job printers.

Kneeland's Candidacy.

Many trade unionists of Boston, as individuals, are taking hold of former Alderman Fred J. Kneeland's campaign for reëlection to the board of aldermen. Tonight a meeting will be held in his interest at the rooms of the Painters' Union, Wells Memorial building, at 8 o'clock. All out of all trades unionists to attend the meeting and aid in electing Mr. Kneeland as their representative at City Hall.

A plan of campaign will be carried out at the meeting to-night. At Mr. Kneeland's request his candidacy will be urged before any union as a body. The members will be asked individually to support him in his campaign.

Women's Auxiliaries.

Typographical Union No. 13 has in hand the formation of a woman's auxiliary. A number of women have already signified their intention of joining the auxiliary, and a meeting for the purpose of forming a permanent organization will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The meeting will be held in the rooms of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union at No. 264 Boylston street.

Another women's organization is being formed in connection with the machinists. An open meeting will take place in the headquarters of Lodge 264 in Central square, Charlestown, to-morrow night. Among the speakers who will address the meeting are Miss Anna Bowen of the Cigar Strippers' Union and of the Union Label League, Arthur Lurie of the Retail Provision Clerks, John J. Connolly of Boston Lodge of Machinists and Max Goldstein of the Bakers' Union.

Printers' Apprentices.

SAVE BABIES BY MILK CHARITY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—With the close of the Summer season of the Nathan Straus Pasteurized milk charity comes the announcement from the health authorities that the infant death rate has been greatly lowered. Though the Summer stations in the parks and congested districts are closed, other stations remain open the year round.

The number of bottles of milk dispensed during the past year was 2,668,807, as against 2,849,194 for the previous year, an increase of 180,387 bottles. In addition 807,070 glasses of milk were sold at a penny a glass.

The statistics show the death rate among children under 5 years of age in August, 1891, prior to the use of Pasteurized milk among the poor, was 60.9 deaths to a thousand, while for the year 1904 the rate was only sixty-three one-hundredths.

Larry Lajoie and his Indians are in town for their last series with Collins's men.

Although his leg has completely healed, Lajoie will not get back into the game until next season. He says he doesn't care to take any chances on it at this stage of the race.

The place of Larry at second is being filled by Barbeau of the Columbus team. He is performing in a creditable manner.

Not only was ill luck in regard to accidents responsible for Cleveland's loss of the pennant, but even now the team is crippled by the absence of several of its stars.

Elmer Flick, the crack right fielder, has gone home with a broken thumb. Earl Moore, who led the league earlier in the season in pitching games and Sherry Bemis, the crack catcher, have also gone home with injuries.

Congalton, from Columbus, is playing right field in flick. Add Joss will pitch for the Clevelands this afternoon. George Winter will probably perform for the Bostons.

"We've been up against tough luck this season," said Lajoie. "There probably was never a team that had a Nemesis pursuing it more doggedly than ours. Just when things seemed right, an accident happened which lost the pennant for us. However, as the old-timer says, 'better luck next time.'"

DISMISSED FOR SMUGGLING.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 2.—An order from Washington has been issued dismissing James A. Anderson of Boston from the customs department. He is the last of the three who were accused of smuggling Lee Chuck Kee, a Chinaman, across the Niagara River, who has been thus dealt with.

HARVARD BASEBALL WORK.

The annual fall baseball practice at Harvard will begin this afternoon at 2:30 on Soldiers Field. The men will report to Captain B. K. Stephenson and Coach Paul N. Coburn. New men are being especially urged to be present, particularly freshmen, so that coaches can get some idea of the material that will be available for the nine. Teams will be picked in a few days, and the series for the fall baseball cups will be played.

DAVE FULTZ BETTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Dave Fultz, the New York Americans' centre fielder, who was injured in Saturday's game when he was in collision with Norman Elberfeld, was said to be improving at the Washington Heights hospital last night. The surgeons said that although Fultz is badly bruised, he will not be permanently disabled, and within a few days will be well enough to leave the hospital.

RUBE WADDELL MAY GET BACK IN GAME TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—The Athletics will play the Browns to-day, to-morrow and Wednesday, and Thursday they will go to Washington for five games. Meanwhile the Chicagos will be playing the Washingtons the first three days of this week and Thursday will inaugurate a series of five games at St. Louis.

Rain may be the making or breaking of a pennant winner.

If the locals win the flag they are now very confident they will win the world's series, as Rube Waddell says his arm is entirely well. For three weeks he has been out of the game and his return will be greatly welcomed by the Stowton fans.

If he is right, the Rube may pitch to-day's game against the Browns.

Fighting Experts Who Have Seen Him in the Ring Regard

KAUFFMANN AS BEST HEAVY IN YEARS

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—Al Kaufmann is talking about the new Western heavyweight, Al Kauffmann. It is believed that he is going to cut as wide a swathe as that of the other Californian, James J. Corbett.

What is liked particularly about Kauffmann is his punch. There is no questioning the effectiveness of it. In his amateur days he generally managed to put each opponent away with one fell swoop of his terrible right. He has opened his professional career auspiciously by disposing of Harry Foley with the first blow that landed.

Old Billy Delaney is as proud as a cat with two tails, although he would have preferred to see the thing last half a dozen rounds or so.

In talking of Kauffmann before the contest Billy said:

"This thing of knocking out amateurs in a punch is all right, as it shows the young fellow had something to start with. I want to see how he acts between rounds though. You can get a line on a novice when he comes to his corner after a gruelling round, and if there are a whole lot rather than diminished with each succeeding performance throughout the week. Hundreds of good sports saw them over and over again, and now have the battle scene impressed upon their memories to such an extent that they are in a position to give off-hand answers to questions concerning any particular occurrence or any stated of gruelling rounds the better the opportunity for noting how stout-hearted he is."

As there was no "between rounds" in the Kauffmann-Foley fight Billy will have to await another opportunity for studying Kauffmann's demeanor while resting.

Delaney Is Satisfied.

Delaney is satisfied that his new find is game, however. It was remarked, by fact at the recent contest that Kauffmann was as cool as a cucumber, while the seasoned fighter, Foley, had a case of nerves.

Kauffmann's style is amateurish. He wastes too much energy in dancing around in time, no doubt, he will copy Fitzsimmons and Jeffries and use his feet in a dignified manner.

No fault can be found with his fist work though. He is as quick as a flash in sending in punches. Referee Jack Welsh thinks Kauffman beat heavyweight that has developed in years.

"I never saw a prettier punch than the one he floored Foley with," said Welsh. Foley's head struck the floor first and then he flattened out."

That the Britt-Nelson moving pictures made a hit with the public was shown by the fact that the attendance increased

The experts have discovered the fatal mistake that Britt made and the deceptive ruse that Nelson used to get his opponent going

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR TELLS HOW TO BE ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL

Simplicity Is Her One Secret of Youth

FRESH as a debutante, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, after a season of Europe and a Summer at Newport, has returned to New York. Other society leaders, after their trying Summer, are jaded and worn. Many look as if a season at a rest cure would do them good. Mrs. Astor looks radiant.

Her complexion is glowing. Her eyes are brilliant. The streaks of silver in her dark hair give distinction to her youthful appearance. Her figure has lost none of the charm of youth. In London she was acclaimed as the most strikingly beautiful woman at one of the last court balls previous to the departure of Ambassador Choate.

"How does she keep her beauty?" is the question every one asks, not of Mrs. Astor particularly, but of her friends. The way she does it is not a secret. It does not require the prescription of a beauty doctor, rigid adherence to difficult rules or any tremendous sacrifice.

Her Secret of Youth

It was a secret until Mrs. Astor confided it to one of her close woman friends. Then it became apparent that she had chosen the one way to retain a youthful, fresh appearance. The formula may be summed up in one word:

Simplicity.

This is the way Mrs. Astor herself told of the simple regimen she has adopted to preserve her freshness and beauty:

"I live simply, take adequate exercise, eat rationally, act with deliberation and get plenty of sleep."

Early during the London season Mrs. Astor realized that the world break down if she went the society pace without something to offset the strain. She decided that the first essential of all was deliberation. She elected to rush slowly. She eliminated from her daily routine all social duties the frantic haste which characterizes the work of social leaders and which leaves them wan, colorless and exhausted at the end of a season.

She kept her temper unruffled. When she found it necessary to be up late she went to bed in the morning and slept late the next day. She did not exhaust herself, and when the season was about over, before her return to the United States, she went to Carlsbad.

Long Morning Walks

While in Newport Mrs. Astor took long morning walks. She continued to rest whenever she thought she required it. She reduced her allowance of food to two meals a day and required that these be of the plainest and most wholesome food, simply prepared. Since she has returned to New York Mrs. Astor has announced that she will continue to observe the rules of hygiene and rest that have worked so beneficially in London and Newport.

The result has been surprising. Beyond a maturity of face and figure and the gray of her hair there is little difference between the Mrs. Astor of to-day and the bride Willing, the Philadelphia belle, whom Colonel Astor courted quite a number of years ago. Certainly whatever the difference, there has been no diminution of charm.

In the simple life Mrs. Astor seems to have found the secret of perpetual youth, her friends declare.

MRS JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR HAT FOR WINTER?

Beatrice Fairfax Warns Girls That They Must Display a Deal of Common Sense When They Pick Out One for The Cold Months

GIRLS, you will need to bring all your common sense to the fore when it comes to choosing your Winter hats.

For to say that the hats of the coming season are queer describes them but feebly.

Really, some of them are monstrosities.

I walked into a shop the other day and asked to see a simple hat, explaining that I wished to wear it to the office, and so did not want anything elaborate.

I might just as well have asked the young woman to show me the wild man of Borneo.

She was quite as able to produce one as the other.

"They are not wearing simple hats this season," she said, loftily, "but here is a neat little thing: how would this suit?" and she perched a "creation" in brown upon my head.

Oh, girls, I wish you had seen me in that hat, but, no, on the whole, I think I am glad you did not, for never again would you have done me the honor of seeking my advice on even the most trivial of subjects.

It turned up and it turned down, it bristled with wings, it fell in cascades of bows at the back, it tilted impertinently to one side and drooped coquettishly on the other; it did every possible thing that a hat could do except look modest and becoming.

The saleswoman assured me that it looked very smart on me, but I knew that if I ever went out in that hat I would be absolutely dominated by it; that I would never for a moment be unconscious of it.

The result is that I am still looking for my "simple" hat.

The secret of being well dressed is being suitably dressed, and no business woman can wear one of these elaborate hats to business and be suitably dressed.

Simplicity should be the keynote of the business costume.

Save your frills and furbelows for home and social functions, but abolish them absolutely from your business costume.

Jewelry of all kinds is out of place in an office.

Hats with ostrich feathers and "plcture" effects are also out of place.

I knew that hat would absolutely dominate me

If you want to look smart and well of my men friends on the hat question.

You know most men think women look better without hats, and I am sure the hats of this season will arouse a storm of criticism and ridicule.

I know the temptation to be "up to date" is a great one to every girl, but the wise girl chooses becoming things rather than stylish ones.

So be wise, dear girls, and don't spoil your pretty faces by absurd headgear.

dressed wear a sensible, becoming hat, a neatly fitting, short-skirted suit and good-looking, common-sense shoes.

Attention to details marks the well-dressed woman, so don't neglect your gloves and shoes.

Don't be tempted to wear one of the fly-away, ridiculous hats that seem to be descending upon us.

I am going to get the opinions of some your pretty faces by absurd headgear.

Keep a Careful Account of All Household Bills

ACCOUNT should be kept of every item spent, for housekeeping is as much a woman's business as office work is the man's and everything should be conducted on strictly business principles.

Every housekeeper should receive a regular weekly sum to carry on the domestic mechanism. Of course this allowance must be in proportion to the yearly income.

Cash transactions should be the rule of a careful housekeeper; it is a fatal mistake to allow indiscriminate tradesmen to call for orders and charge whatever prices they may see fit. Where account pass payments cannot be made bills should never run for longer than a week at a time.

Always keep receipts on file, only destroying one month's bills when you have receipts for those of a later date; as the last paid account cancels all previous ones.

Accounts for special items should not be destroyed under a year, and whenever possible it is advisable to pay bills by check, since a check constitutes a receipt.

Always pay a visit to your butcher, fish man or poultry man yourself, and choose your own meat or whatever article is the object of your purchase. One frequently finds it may be equally cheap to buy as a change a chicken instead of a roast, and one can only ascertain the condition and prices of these goods by personal inspection.

It is well to make a regular weekly list of the groceries required for the household. Pay for them at the time of purchase and always keep a certain amount of canned goods and other items in reserve in case of an unexpected visitor, when the addition of some extra dish would be an advantage. Reductions are often made when purchases consist of a dozen pounds, or dozen tins, and where one's cupboard is large, sugar, biscuits, jams, etc., should be bought in large quantities.

Secrets of Boiling Fresh Beef, Salt Meats, Mutton and Hams to a Delicious Turn

BOILING is one of the simplest processes of cooking, but yet it is very frequently not properly attended to. It is so easy to boil anything hard, to boil it tough or to boil it to rags. Therefore it may be of interest to BOSTON AMERICAN readers to read a few hints on how to boil fresh beef, salt beef and mutton.

For the first example let us consider boiling a piece of fresh beef weighing, say, fourteen pounds. First, what can be added to improve the flavor of the meat during the boiling? Fill the pot, preferably an iron one, half full of water. Then add two onions, two carrots and a few pieces of celery. Let the water come to a lively boil and then put in the beef. This, of course, will stop the water boiling, but leave it over the fire until it starts to boil again.

Then when it has boiled a couple of minutes move the pot back on the stove and let it stand without boiling for an hour. After that bring it closer to the fire and let it get only just hot enough so that occasional bubbles rise to the surface. This is the general rule to allow ten or twelve minutes to each pound of beef, but it is hard to make it any hard and fast law, as even this far-off pleasure to look forward to during the long days of morning regularity of prison life.

The influences that now surrounded him were those of a crawless monotony and repression. His days were strictly joyless hopeless, unbeautiful. His occupations were unmarked by a single deviation from his routine of a machine-like discipline.

Awakened at 5 o'clock in the morning, he washed in his bucket of water.

Prison Routine

No sooner was he dressed than a warder came round asking if he wished to see the doctor or the governor. The warder was followed by one of the convict night-men, who handed into his cell a little brown can—the day's allowance of water.

Then came the breakfast of a pint of cocoa, sweetened with brown sugar, and eating mixture that he had difficulty in eating, but which he usually managed to force down.

The breakfast came collowing. He washed the slate down with the water he had himself used. At a quarter to seven he was marched with his fellows in a single file to chapel for morning prayers, which were read by one of the chief warders.

At seven the various working gangs were formed in parties on the parade ground.

Every man was then carefully searched by the warders, and if any contraband articles were found concealed about his clothing—needles, pins, fragments of string or paper, indeed anything except the case articles he was allowed to carry, his handkerchief—they were taken from him. Nothing escaped the searchers' eyes, and woe betide the prisoner who was found in possession of the merest fragment of tobacco.

After this first search of the day the outdoor gangs were marched past and counted by their armed wardens and the civil guards. Those having work inside the prison, such as tailors, shoemakers, basket-makers and stocking knitters, remained in the yard for an hour's walking exercise.

At 11 all returned to the parade ground to be again searched, and by that hour dinner was served in the cells.

The dinner on three days of the week consisted of three ounces of fat mutton or the same quantity of boiled meat pressed, bling india rubber, with a few potatoes.

"CONVICT 99"

HOW AN IRISH-AMERICAN WAS PERSECUTED IN AN ENGLISH PRISON

Synopsis

LAURENCE CRAIG, core a poor Lowell mill hand, but now the trusted confidential employe of Christopher Lucas, the rich London merchant, told beautiful Geraldine Lucas of his love on the night of the ball at Feston Court. A typical young Irish-American, whose pluck and perseverance carried him to the front, he was a man who might stir the heart of any woman.

The next evening, when he called to learn his fate, he found the secret in her eyes and he told the story of his boyhood life in the Massachusetts mill town. With the blessing of Mr. Lucas, the rich merchant's promise to make the junior partner in the firm, the young man left Feston Court with a light heart, should he fail to believe that it was not all a sort of Arabian Nights tale, that would fade with the morning.

But his bright dream of the happy future was suddenly broken when two detectives armed with warrants forced their way into the room of the nearest police station, where he was placed under arrest on the charge of having murdered Charles Kesteven, an accountant, who had been examining the books of Christopher Lucas & Co., and had discovered that some one had embezzled several thousands and made false entries to cover up the defalcations.

All the circumstantial evidence pointed to Craig, who had been in the same train with Kesteven, and the accountant had been found, murdered and robbed, in a railway carriage after the hall at Feston Court, at which Laurence and Geraldine had been married. Geraldine, however, believed in her lover.

The trial at which Kesteven had been killed was taken from Craig's dock in a flash, when it had been used as a paper knife, in fact, the very weapon with which Craig had cut the pages so closely sworn about him that every one in the courtroom regarded him as a self-confessed murderer. A fragment of the murdered man's watch-chain, which Craig had given to his wife as a present, was also found in his possession, and Craig was pointed to his having taken the knife with which the crime was committed deliberately and ordered the accountant to keep him from discovering the robbery. Circumstantial evidence, however, could be but one result, and Laurence Craig was found guilty of wilful murder, and sentenced to be executed and taken to the scene of his legal death.

Commutation of his sentence followed, and he was sent to Wormwood Scrubs to begin a life of imprisonment.

Subsequently he was transferred to Grimler Prison, where he was known as Convict 99.

At last Craig was allowed to write to Geraldine, and a new hope now in his breast—hope of liberty.

Ralph Vickers found out he was to be transferred to another prison, and he devised a plan to meet him at the railroad station and "do" Craig. Vickers was a convict warder, and he knew that his permission to leave the prison was the consequence of being warden to be good to Laurence.

Vickers visited Grimler and persuaded Warder Cranswell, who had charge of Laurence, to let him sit as hard as possible for his promotion depended on it. Vickers was to be allowed to travel with the very convict he was directed to watch, and so he could see Craig's fair name in person.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

"ONE of that chattering there," he growled. "Here, Ninety-nine, fall back to the rear. I can see what you're up to, I know your tricks, getting alongside of a man that's going to be released. You're trying to send a message by him to your swell friends. Fall back to the rear. By the left, close up the files, there."

Laurence thus separated from a man whose conversation had given him a few moments' surcease from the bitterness of gnawing regret, found himself placed with an old gray-haired man who was a stranger to him.

It was not long before his new companion spoke.

"Not much chance of choosing one's companions here, mate, is there?" he said under his breath.

"No," said Laurence. "But I see no earthly reason why I should have been separated from that man. I'm rather vexed, as he happens to be from a part of the country I know well."

"Oh, yes. Two Thousand is rather a rum one. Do you know the circumstances?"

"No! I respect the etiquette of not asking a man anything about his misfortune," said Laurence.

"Exactly. But that man's case is peculiarly sad. His offence against the law was trifling. It bitterness that his child was ill with rubley, and she wanted some ripe fruit to eat. The father went out to a neighboring orchard to buy a pound or two of fruit, and was caught in the act. The orchard man and his family were all out, and the house was empty.

"So our friend thought he would go to the next tree and take what fruit he wanted and pay for it another day. He was picking a few pears and pocketing them when the owner of the orchard returned, caught him, and gave him into custody. He was sent to trial without counsel; his plea that he really meant to pay for the pears was not listened to, and it was proved that he had been unfortunate once before. The case went against him.

British Justice

"The first offence, for which he served two months, was that he dog had killed a partridge. He was sent to the magistrate who tried him. For his second offence, the supposed stealing of the pears, the same considerate representative of the law sentenced him to five years' penal servitude."

"It is surprising," said Laurence.

"So this day, continued the old man, "your friend does not know if his child recovered from her illness, or if his wife has been able to keep out of the workhouse."

"Hasn't he written or received letters?" asked Laurence.

"Unfortunately he lost his marks, and was denied the privilege of writing, until his release he will know nothing of his family, nor they of him. A good deal may happen in five years, you know. Ah, talking of those ripe pears always makes my mouth water. But there you are, mate; if we break our country's laws we must suffer the penalty.

"I broke them. Heaven knows I was guilty, and my crime is being justly punished. I shall die a convict, for I can't stay out five years—I'm not built of such strong young man like you. As for me—well, I shall have a nameless grave. I who have acted with the best society in England."

Laurence looked down at the man's badge and saw that his sentence was similar to his own—Life. He gathered in further conversation that his companion had been a medical man with a large practice in Mayfair.

But if Laurence had known what the evil heart of Ralph Vickers had planned he might not have slept that night as soundly as he did.

CHAPTER XII.

Mishap or Murder?

LAURENCE CRAIG had heard many a sad life history during the hours of exercise on Sundays, when the rigid rule against talking was somewhat relaxed. But the story of convict 2000 remained in his mind. It was a story which reminded him that, unhappy as was his lot, there were others among his companions who endured an injustice not less hard.

It was probable that this particular convict had lost his privilege of writing to his wife through his own misconduct or gross subordination, but this made his case no less pitiable to Laurence, who had Geraldine's letter to comfort him.

What would he have done without that token of her love? How could he have kept his self-control, have refrained from suicide, was it not for the little words she had written in the book?

Then, when it has boiled a couple of minutes move the pot back on the stove and let it stand without boiling for half an hour. # TWELVE RULES FOR CHILDREN

THERE are twelve good rules which every girl and boy should master before they reach the age of fifteen:

Be courteous to every one, whatever their station in life.
Shut the door, and shut it softly.
Keep your own room in good order.
Have an hour for rising, and rise.
Never let a button stay off twenty-four hours.
Always know where your things are.
Never let a day pass without doing something to make somebody comfortable.
Never comes to breakfast without a collar.
Never go about with your shoes unbuttoned.
Speak clearly enough for every one to understand.
Never fidget or hum so as to disturb others.
Never fuss or fret.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I have a little red spot on my nose that makes the skin, but growing plainly through it. What will remove it? A. T.

SUCH discolorations must be treated according to the specific character of each, but electricity, when applied by an expert, is really the most effective and the safest remedy.

If, however, the mark is very slight the daily use of a lotion made as follows will usually clear it away perfectly in time:

|---|---|
| Bitter almonds | 2 drums |
| Bichloride of mercury (coarse powder) | 15 grains |
| Bleached Jordan almonds | 1 ounce |
| Distilled water | 1 pint |

With half the water make the almonds into an emulsion, strain it and gradually add the mercury previously dissolved in the other half of the water. When this is done, add enough water to make it measure exactly one pint. This is a poisonous mixture, so keep it out of the reach of children.

HOW TO MAKE TASTY OYSTER DISHES

FRY half a tablespoonful of chopped onion and two tablespoonfuls mushrooms in three tablespoons butter for five minutes; add four tablespoons flour and one-third cup each of oyster liquor and chicken stock.

Season with salt, pepper and cayenne. Parboil one pint large oysters, remove the tough muscle and dip in the sauce, which has been cooled by the addition of an egg yolk. Then roll in bread crumbs, which are the dryings and scrapings of bread, and all, put through the crumbler; the regular crumbs may be used for the outer coating when frying; also the mushrooms may be chopped, if one prefers them finely.

To make the tartar sauce: To one-half cup of mayonnaise dressing add one-half tablespoon each of capers, olives, pickles and parsley, finely chopped.

Oysters au gratin make another dainty dish.

Bring one quart of oysters to the boiling point in their own liquor; drain and reserve the liquor. Heat one-fourth cup butter to brown, add one-fourth cup flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-fourth of pepper and a grating of nutmeg, and heat until smooth; dilute gradually with one cup of the oyster liquor heated.

Remove saucepan, and as soon as the sauce boils add one-half cup cream, and when it boils add the oysters. Pour the mixture into buttered shells, cover with buttered cracker crumbs and bake until crumbs are brown. Serve on a folded napkin.

Add one tablespoonful grated cheese, if desired, just before the oysters are put in.

Scallop shells can be bought at the fish markets for serving oysters, clams, scallops and fish; they are also used for macaroni, vegetables and chopped meats, etc., and make individual serving very easy.

SCORE OF BRANCHES OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP LEAGUE TO BE ORGANIZED THIS WEEK TO AID IN FIGHT ON GRAFT

Non-Partisan Clubs, Forming Rapidly in All Parts of City, Show Intense Interest Taken By all Classes in Movement for Public Control of Public Utilities.

Before the end of this week, the secretary of the Boston Municipal Ownership League has been informed, there will be a score of branch organizations formed in this city. These organizations are non-partisan and anti-graft. In them will be some of the most prominent and conservative citizens of Boston.

To-day a number of letters reached the secretary relative to the conditions of membership and the way to form clubs. Many of the correspondents referred to the statement of the venerable Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the noted writer, published in yesterday's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, in which he expressed his views in favor of the principles for which the league stands.

The temper of the people upon this question, regardless of party affiliation, was partly shown in the recent primary elections. Many of the candidates won upon that principle. The real feeling of the people, however, has been indicated by the letters from all classes that have been received by the secretary of the Boston Municipal Ownership League.

Club with 100 Members.

Men who were not supposed to have been able to give this subject consideration have shown that they know a great deal about it and are in favor of it. These men are in all classes of life ranging from the financier and professional man down to the day laborer.

A report of an enthusiastic municipal ownership meeting comes to-day from Ward 18. It was held yesterday at Dudley Hall, near the Dudley street terminal. A club with a membership of more than a hundred was formed as a result of the work of Thomas J. Fay, James A. Watson, William B. Larkin, Daniel F. Daly and others. One of the enthusiastic workers along the municipal ownership line is former Congressman M. J. McEttrick of Ward 17. He is a candidate for the House, and it is believed safe to consider that he will be elected. This is his brief but emphatic statement relative to municipal ownership:

One of the Pioneers.

"Every principle of doctrine of municipal ownership is embodied in every act of my legislative career. I am a pioneer in the cause, not by reason of promises, but by actual accomplishments."

Mr. McEttrick, in his second statement, refers to the fact that he was largely instrumental in having passed in the Legislature of the State bills authorizing cities and towns to make and furnish gas and electricity for public use.

Those who desire to become members of the Boston Municipal Ownership League will find a blank for enrollment to-day on the editorial page. Fill it out, taking care with writing, and send it to the secretary, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

HOW TO FORM A MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP CLUB

EVERY voter is eligible.

Republicans, Democrats, Social Laborers, Social Democrats, Prohibitionists, People's Party men and men of all shades of political opinion can join municipal ownership clubs and organize them.

A Municipal Ownership Club is a demonstration of civic pride, a protest against looting by public service corporations who control faithless public officials, a blow at corruption in official circles, and a call for cheaper and improved utilities.

All who think Boston and Bostonians should pay only as much or less for public utilities than other cities and their residents should organize these clubs.

All who want reduced municipal taxation should use their influence and voices to build up as many and as strong clubs as possible.

In Chicago, election district clubs were first formed. When two or more were formed in any one Assembly District, they merged themselves into one Assembly District club.

Each organization made its own bylaws and formed its own plan of action within the purpose of the organization.

District meetings were held frequently. General meetings were called when public necessity demanded or public sentiment impelled.

The BOSTON AMERICAN will publish all news about the organization of municipal ownership clubs.

The BOSTON AMERICAN will furnish blanks for clubs and other necessary printing.

Apply for information, blanks, etc., to Secretary, Boston Municipal Ownership League, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

A Story of Stirring Adventure, Afloat and Ashore, of a Brave Boy

By CAPTAIN RICHARD RUDD, Author of "WHO KILLED GERALD BROWN?"

OUR young hero's determination to capture Hunston had led him through many adventures, but at last his efforts seemed about to be crowned with success. He had just escaped death a score of times, but this time it looked as though the alert Hunston was enmeshed beyond all escape. Jack fearlessly entered the house where his quarry had taken to cover, only to find himself face to face with the muzzle of a gun.

CHAPTER XLIII.

A Dynamite Ambush

JACK looked for barely more than a second at the man before him. Then he turned and called to Steele:

"Surround the house and guard all the escapes. Watch every man that leaves. This is not Hunston at all!"

The gun before him swerved just an instant, and in that instant Jack had seized it and wrested it from the other's grasp.

"Take this impostor in charge," he said to one of the crowd behind him. "It is well that he isn't what he is pretending to be, or it would go hard with him."

A great crowd gathered about the man, but it was a prudent crowd, and not until he was secured bound did anyone offer to conduct him to a police station.

Meanwhile, Jack was not idle.

He had heard a noise in the rear of the house.

Telling Steel to run around outside, he went into the hall and entered the kitchen just in time to see the real Hunston dodging out of a window.

Steel was a second too late.

Hunston was out and into the yard before anyone could stop him.

Three or four men in the road tried to interfere with him, but he struck out right and left in his usual manner, and they were glad enough to fall back.

In two minutes' time he had dodged into the woods, and only Jack was left to pursue him. Steel having been tripped up by some of the many accomplices Hunston had in the crowd.

A Stern Chase

A stern chase is a long one.

Hunston, Jack concluded, was unarmed, for he no longer showed fight.

He put all his energy into flight, and fight alone.

He had paused for a moment on entering the wood, which was a fringe of low trees bordering on Van Cortlandt Park.

But as soon as he saw that Jack was following him he started away again at a speed that astonished the boy.

Jack was fleet of foot.

He had trained himself all his life to run, and he counted himself far better than the average lad of his age, but he soon saw that he was no match for this marvelous old man, who went leaping and bounding through the trees like a deer.

Often he would disappear in some clump of undergrowth, and Jack would enter it heading, hoping to find the old man hiding there, but invariably when he reached it he heard a splashing in the underbrush ahead of him, and looking through the leaves gaining steadily on him.

He did not dare shoot after him.

The woods hardened the park, and they were full of children picnicking.

To shoot at random through them would mean to endanger human life, and Jack was too wise to do that.

His heart was now beating like a trip hammer, and his throat was parched and dry.

A pain shot through his side, and grew almost unendurable.

His lungs seemed ready to burst, but still he kept on, for he felt that this was to be the last chase, and that it would be victorious.

And the thought of Hunston's pretty adopted daughter and the fate that awaited her if this old rascal was not speedily stopped him at last gave him renewed strength.

Almost a Capture

Soon the wood was passed, and Hunston, now fully three blocks ahead of him, entered an avenue, and sprinted along as if he were a cross-country runner.

Jack kept him well in sight, and pressed onward, but his eyes were on Hunston, and he did not see a child that had run out across the road in his path.

He was on it before he knew it, and before he could get up again and assure himself that the little one was more scared than hurt, Hunston was away, and running faster than ever.

Suddenly the old man left the road and dashing through a cluster of bushes who were working on a rock pile near by, made a leap of fully twenty feet to the ground, landing heavy of the ground, and it seemed as if an acre of stone was lifted in the air and scattered about the neighborhood.

TO BE CONTINUED.

TO THE BOY READERS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN:

HERE is a thought for to-day. Sam-uel Johnson once wrote:

"In all the griefs that harass the distressed sure the most bitter is a scornful jest."

His words are a good thing to remember. Never make a joke or play a trick that will hurt any one's feelings. It is just as easy to have fun that pleases every one as to have fun for a crowd at the expense of one or two. A cruel face is the most cruel torture to schoolmates is being made fun of. Don't forget that.

150 IN WARD 18 JOIN OWNERSHIP CLUB

The Jefferson Municipal Ownership Club has been formed in Ward 18 with a membership of more than 150 voters. The organization was effected after an enthusiastic meeting held yesterday at Dudley Hall, which was attended by about 500 people. The club will secure permanent headquarters and keep up a campaign of agitation and education until after the municipal election.

This branch organization of the Boston Municipal Ownership League is said to be formed in the city, is composed of leading business and professional men of Roxbury and made up for the greater part of the combined forces of James A. Watson, Thomas J. Fay and William B. Larkin.

It was pointed out by one of the speakers at the meeting that the Watson-Fay-Larkin combination, basing his predictions up-on the vote at the recent primaries, would capture the ward at the municipal polls. Their total vote at the two primaries was 1,495, while that of the opposing candidates was 1,230.

It is the intention of the founders of the Jefferson Municipal Ownership Club to make the organization one of the strongest of the kind in the city.

The principal addresses at the meeting was made by G. S. MacFarland of Cambridge. His argument for municipal ownership was enthusiastically applauded, as were short addresses made by Mr. Watson, Mr. Fay and Mr. Larkin. Another meeting will be held in the near future, which will be addressed by men prominent in the municipal ownership movement.

A committee of nine was appointed to draw up by-laws for the club and secure permanent headquarters. On the committee are James A. Watson, Jr., Thomas J. Fay, M. F. O'Brien, William B. Larkin, Edward F. Burke, Daniel F. Daly, William Curley and George Curran.

COL. HIGGINSON FOR CIVIC OWNERSHIP

Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson of Cambridge, scholar, soldier, student, author and historian, in an interview dictated to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, declares that municipal ownership is on the winning side. Following is his statement:

By Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

I DO not know how it is with others, but to me it seems inevitable that as a man grows older in this country he must feel more and more inclined toward the principal of municipal ownership, for the reason that he can look back upon the gradual transfer to the community of so manythings originally undertaken by private enterprise alone.

I can remember, for instance, when it cost a great struggle to establish a public library in a town or city, when it was predicted that the Boston Public Library itself would become nothing but a depository for public documents and worn out directories. I have myself had to do with the establishment of public libraries in several places where I have lived, namely Newburyport, Worcester, Newport, R. I., and now in Cambridge, my birthplace, and I have seen every one of them so prosper and command such universal approval that all the old subscription libraries in those places were apt to pass into their hands.

Past Gain in Face of Constant Distrust.

I have been during all my mature life connected with public schools, and I can remember when the "town school," as it was formerly habitually called, was habitually regarded as a place for the absolutely poor and their children.

And long after the common schools were tolerably established, the effort to create high schools called out a new objection. I was for three years on the Massachusetts Board of Education and for two years on the Committee on Education in the Legislature, and even up to those times had to fight against the lingering prejudice against those institutions, especially in the case of the high school. Yet who now favors its disuse?

Then there was the same distrust as to the municipal supply of textbooks, and I knew cases where the experiment was tried once or twice and abandoned, before it became established as a part of the municipal system.

I remember the time when the bridges out of Boston were owned by individuals, when the only good roads were turnpike roads, when the water supply of Boston and other cities was in the hands of aqueduct associations.

During all this period the changes were always in the direction of municipal ownership. I can think of no similar change in the other direction, and I do not see how any American citizen, as he grows older, can help drawing the conclusion that all the old subscription libraries in those places were apt to pass into their hands.

England Is Much in Advance in the Work.

Of course each case, as it comes up, must be taken up by itself, but this is the general tendency of things, and it is strange to an American, with this thought in his mind, to find the principle applied so much more promptly and rapidly in England.

It is due, perhaps, to the fact that the English are less vast in their enterprises than Americans, and for that very reason can follow out a fundamental principle more surely and methodically than we do.

It takes an American some time, for instance, to realize, while in England, that the postal-telegraphic system is always ready to do the work done by the express companies and much more promptly than it is done here and at a much lower price; and it is hard for him to believe that Birmingham and Manchester supply gas for small expense in proportion to the population than is done in American cities, and yet pay large sums of money into the city treasuries.

As I have said, each case must be judged by itself as it comes up, but I do not see how anyone can observe the tendencies of the last half century without admitting that municipal ownership is on the winning side.

SAY CHILDREN ARE FIREBUGS

According to the Chelsea police, the several incendiary fires in that town during the past month have been set by children. The police have learned who the children are.

It is thought that the fire which destroyed the Mount Bellingham Methodist Church last Monday was set by these youngsters. Several small blazes have been discovered in nearly the same district, and both the Chelsea and State police have been kept on the jump.

BOSTON MAN IN 'FRISCO ASYLUM

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 2.—Philip Wheatland of Boston, once a student at Harvard University, and well known here among clubmen, was to-day judged insane by the lunacy commission and ordered committed to the State Hospital at Napa.

Wheatland's wife was the principal witness at the hearing. She testified that her husband's skull was fractured by a fall from a car, which occurred five years ago, and that at times he acted queerly and seemed not responsible. Especially was this so when he drank, and probably accounted for his taking a bottle of wine from the State Board of Trade exhibit. Attorney J. H. Mee made a similar statement to the board regarding Wheatland, who had been his client.

MAINE GRANITE WORKERS STRIKE

STONINGTON, Me., Oct. 2.—The refusal of six local granite firms to grant the demand of 850 quarrymen for an eight-hour day and recognition of the union has inaugurated a strike in the quarries, which may involve more than 500 men. Representatives of the firms, after a conference, declared their intention of closing their plants rather than accede to the demands of the men.

SHIP HITS MINE; 15 DROWN.

CHEFOO, Oct. 2.—The coasting steamer Heileho, plying between Shanghai and Tientsin, struck a mine and was destroyed thirty miles south of Shantung. Fifteen persons were drowned.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 2, 1905.

Are You a Sheep? No? Good

But Some of Us That Think We Are Not Sheep Are Really the Most Foolish Sheep of All—A German Story

Copyright, 1905, by Star Company.

Many of us pride ourselves on "strength of mind."

We often show strength of mind in refusing to do what we ought to do, and what we don't want to do.

For instance, the man who refuses to give money to relatives or friends that need it very often prides himself on "strength of mind"—it is a more pleasing label than "meanness." The man who refuses to help an old man or an old woman begging in the streets often enjoys the idea that strength of mind is the foundation of his refusal to help.

Strength of mind is a fine thing—very unusual.

It indicates that a man is able to form judgments for himself, to take a line of action independent of the movements and moods of the mob. To act for yourself, to have a really new idea, or be influenced entirely by your own judgment and knowledge is most rare. Emerson said something like this

"Nothing is rarer in this world THAN AN ACT OF ONE'S OWN."

Those poor foolish animals, the sheep, are typical of all that is weak and commonplace in brain construction. If you know anything of sheep, you will understand the two pictures inserted in this column by way of illustration.

The sheep in the crowd do anything that is done by the leading sheep—however foolish.

If you hold up a stick and make the leading sheep jump over it—every sheep behind will jump at that point, even after the stick has been withdrawn.

THEY FIND IT EASIER TO JUMP UP INTO THE AIR THAN TO MAKE AN EFFORT OF OBSERVATION AND OF BRAIN.

A good many of us human beings imagine that we think for ourselves and act for ourselves, when we are really like the last sheep in these two pictures. This sheep is a German sheep, drawn by a German humorist in Fliegende Blaetter.

The sheep foolishly jump off the bridge—observe the strong-minded sheep in the rear.

A number of sheep were going along a road when they came to a narrow bridge with no railing. The leading sheep got a little more than half way over—and suddenly jumped off the bridge to the left into the water.

One after another all the poor foolish sheep that couldn't think, that had no STRENGTH OF MIND, jumped in after him.

But the last sheep said to himself:

"I have strength of mind."

He looked with pitying scorn at all the sheep jumping off the bridge to the left, one after the other, and then with great pride in his own strength of mind HE JUMPED OFF THE BRIDGE TO THE RIGHT. He was a German sheep and said: "Ich gehe meinen eigenen Weg—I go my own way." But the foolish bellwether led him as it led the others.

The strong-minded sheep—not to be led by others—proves his strength of mind. But he JUMPS all the same.

That sheep was like a great many of us human beings. He felt smart and proud because he wouldn't do what the other sheep did.

He thought he had a brain of his own. And when they foolishly jumped off the bridge on the LEFT hand side, he waited for a moment, patted himself on the back, and then jumped off on the RIGHT hand side—doing exactly what they did, but a little more foolishly.

Let the story of the German sheep teach you that while strength of mind is a fine quality, a foolish imitation of it amounts to little.

If you can learn to use your brain wisely, to free yourself from the foolish example of the multitude—well and good.

But if you make an enormous effort and a great fuss, and puff yourself up with pride and then jump off the right hand side of the bridge when the other sheep jump off the left hand side—don't feel that you are any wonder.

E. Z. MARK BUYS AN AUTOMOBILE

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

1. STRANGER—Ah, Mr. Mark, I'm from the garage. Just brought this auto up for you to look at it. It's as good as new. Guaranteed five years. Cost $7,000. Owner forced to sell. Will let you have it for $2,000 and let you try it for thirty days.
MR. E. Z.—By Jove! I'll take it. It's a bargain. I CAN'T lose.

2. STRANGER—Mr. Mark, as there are others after this machine would you mind letting me have—say $300 to bind the bargain? Business is business, you know. Ah, thank you; I must be off now to report sale at the garage. Will bring you up necessary papers later.—Good day.

3. MR. E. Z.—By Jove, talk about luck! Why, hello, Doc! Been in to see Mrs. Mark? How do you find her to-day? Say, Doc, what do you think of my luck? Just bought this beautiful machine for $2,000; guaranteed for five years. It's worth $7,000.

4. THE DOCTOR—Why, man alive, what are you talking about? That is MY machine. I left it out here while I went in to call on Mrs. Mark. You paid a man $300 to bind the bargain? Ye Gods! Mr. Mark, you've been buncoed. Ha, ha, ho, ho!

Lessons in Municipal Ownership

IV.

Where the Profits Go

By Prof. Frank Parsons

IN the preceding lesson we learned that Richmond by making her own gas has saved about $3,000,000 out of gas rates considerably lower than those of surrounding private companies, while Boston, or the metropolitan district, has lost $50,000,000 or more by letting a few individuals absorb the gas franchises, establish works, fix charges and build up their plants and cash profits year after year from the gas rates.

In Richmond the gas profits go to the people. The whole city is enriched. Every citizen is a partner in the gas works and its benefits.

In Boston the gas profits do not go to the people, but to a few private stockholders—a little body of monopolists to whom the mass of the people pay tribute in the form of a gas tax.

The returns of the companies for June, 1905, show that all but four of the 5,000 shares of the Boston Gas Company were held by nine shareholders in Massachusetts; all but seven of the 20,000 shares of the Bay State Gas were held by eight stockholders in Massachusetts; the whole 10,000 shares of the Massachusetts Pipe Line were in the hands of eight persons in Massachusetts; eight holders had 5,180 of the 5,196 shares of the Dorchester Gas Company; sixteen persons held 19,068 of the 20,000 shares of the Brookline Gas Company; nine men held 4,387 of the 4,400 of the South Boston shares; nineteen held all but eighty-two of the 8,800 East Boston shares; fifteen held 2,484 of the 2,500 Jamaica Plain shares, and eight shareholders possessed all but seven of the 6,000 shares of the Roxbury Gas Company.

The condensation of gas holdings is much greater than even these figures indicate. The returns for all these companies show the same man as president, with a salary from each company, and the officers overlap promiscuously.

For example, two of the officers of the Bay State hold the same positions in the Massachusetts Pipe. Two of the Dorchester's officers are also officers of the Bay State and two are officers of the Massachusetts Pipe. The whole eight directors of the South Boston Company are the same as the directors of the Bay State. This is true also of the Roxbury board of directors. And all the companies interlock more or less.

In fact the returns show the whole gas field as practically controlled by eight or ten men, even before the formal merger. And eight of the ten men who own the whole stock of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, which they organized to absorb the companies above named, and any others they can get hold of anywhere in the State—eight of these men are the identical eight who controlled the Bay State, Pipe, Roxbury and South Boston.

It is easy to see that gas profits in Boston are not likely to spread out much. It will not be surprising if less than one hundredth of one per cent. of the people have any appreciable share in those profits, while in Richmond the full one hundred per cent. of the people share in the ownership and profits of the gas plant.

Which plan do you like best? The plan which diffuses benefit among the whole people or the plan which concentrates vast profits in the hands of a few?

No! Money's Not the Only Thing

By James J. Montague

"Money's not the only thing,
Said old John D.
"Money's only money
(But it's good enough for me).

"There's lots of other things a man should have, I'm free to state:
There's stocks and bonds and railroad shares and oil and real estate;
There's options on the Congressmen and pipe lines underground,
And banks and stores and factories—one finds them all around.
I've been collecting dollars for some two and fifty years,
But they are not the only things"—(and John burst into tears).

"Money's not the only thing,
Said old John D.
"The ownership of Standard Oil
Is good enough for me.

"I've got a place at Tarrytown and one at Forest Hill,
And other things I couldn't keep inside a wicker till;
I've got a bunch of mortgages, and many goodly tanks—
The latter I'd be puzzled to find room for in the banks,
No; money's not the only thing. It readily appears
That Standard Oil is worth the while"—(and John burst into tears).

"Money's not the only thing,
Said old John D.
A thought that should give comfort to
The souls of you and me.

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT?

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

"Dear me!" said pushing Mrs. Lee. "How comical! Well, well!

"I don't see how on earth you draw The pictures that you sell."

Her husband wasn't so polite, His comment was: "Haw! Haw!

"I don't see how on earth you sell The pictures that you draw."
